Resigns Aldo Caira reads his letter of resignation at the Wilmington selectmen's meeting, Tuesday night.

Caira resigns, replaced by son

For Aldo Caira, election to the national presidency of the Order of Sons of Italy has had its cost.

Citing time commitments to his new position, Caira on Tuesday night submitted his resignation as a member of the Wilmington Board of Selectmen. In a letter which he read to Chairman John Imbimbo, he expressed "mixed emotions," but said, "I feel that I wouldn't be true to myself if I stayed on the board."

Caira will be succeeded on the board by his son Michael, a former selectman. He was nominated for the position by Selectman Bob Cain. After consulting with him by telephone, the board voted unanimously to name him to temporarily fill the vacancy. His father abstained from the vote.

"Are you sure you know what you're getting yourself in for?" Aldo asked his son. Michael Caira served on the Board of Selectmen from 1972 to 1975, and was succeeded in office by his father. Aldo Caira was elected to his third three-year term earlier this year. The seat will be permanently filled with a candidate for a two-year term in the annual town election in April.

Pack 56 meeting
Cub Pack 56, Wilmington will meet at the Congregational Church, Tuesday, Sept. 22 at 6:45 p.m. This will be an open pack meeting and registration of boys eight years old or who have completed grade two will be held.

Boys must be accompanied by a parent or guardian.

Telethon workers

Mary DiGirolamo and Tillie Walsh were among the volunteers who handled the telephones during the Jerry Lewis Telethon at the Oakdale Mall on Labor Day. The local telethon raised $32,000, with an equal amount raised in outside activities. The total for the greater Lowell area was $99,300.

No sale

The Wilmington Planning Board, by a unanimous vote on September 8 wrote a letter to the Wilmington Board of Selectmen, requesting that the selectmen refrain from further sale of town owned land. The vote was on motion of William Hooper.

The planning board told the selectmen that it desires to review the properties, and to "study them" in depth before further sales are to be made.

Fincom approves school funds

Sparse attendance is the norm at hearings of the Wilmington Finance Committee. The usual level of attendance is somewhere between a dozen and 20 people, including members of the committee.

The fincom hearing Wednesday night was packed with more than 100 persons, many of them angry parents of children scheduled to attend the Swain School.

A fincom committee hearing always precedes town meeting in Wilmington. It is an opportunity for people who have business before the town meeting to make known to the finance committee their points regarding the business. Often, the hearing gives some preview of the mood that the town meeting will carry. After the hearing, the fincom votes its recommendations on the articles.

Wednesday night's fincom hearing was hectic. The discussion of the Swain School lasted for two hours, with many parents speaking in opposition to the opening of the school. A few parents said that they supported the opening of the school.

The entire School Committee was present. Chairman John Brooks was spokesman.

The discussion of the Swain School opening was before the finance committee because Article 1 of the warrant for the special town meeting includes a supplementary appropriation of $309,000 for the school department. Included in that money are the salaries of the teachers who will staff the Swain School.

Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski presented a review of the articles before the fincom. His supplementary budget, Article 1 on the warrant, includes $15,000 for maintenance of public buildings, money that will be used to pay a janitor at the Swain School; salary adjustments (pay raises) of $230,000; a deduction of $50,000 from the unemployment account; $35,000 in the reserve fund; and the school appropriation of $309,000.

Stapczynski called on Supt. of Public Buildings Roy McClanahan to speak regarding the safety of the Swain School.

McClanahan said that the building had been in continuous use as a school since 1914. "Is it safe? Yes," he said.

"I believe that the Swain can be used as a school this year without any problems," McClanahan said.

Robert DeSantis spoke, saying that he represented the concerns of many parents. "We feel the Swain is a totally regressive movement on the part of the School Department."

DeSantis said that he was still not convinced that it costs more to heat the Glen Road than it does the Swain. He said that he was concerned that more members of the school committee had not visited the Swain before the vote was taken to reopen the school. Other concerns he had were for the toilet facilities, water conditions, the volume of air changes, and the facilities for children in the 766 program.

Parents protest A group of parents gathered at the Swain School as schools opened on Wednesday morning, protesting conditions within the school. Linda Alpers was interviewed by Jim Boyd of Channel Five.

Acting Supt. of Schools Dr. Carol Sager took the floor to reply. "Nobody is telling you that the Swain School is the Glen Road," she said. "We are doing the best we can educationally for our children."

"It's not the walls that teach," Dr. Sager said. It's the teachers who teach. She said that the teachers at the Swain School were some of the best in the system.

Roy McClanahan, superintendent of public buildings, presented figures for heating costs. The cost of heating the Glen Road School, he said, was $16,124, more than double the cost of heating the Swain, $6752. It was later brought out that the cost for the Boutwell was over $18,000.

The reason for such high heating costs in the Glen Road and the Boutwell, explained Brooks, was poorly designed heating systems which require a large amount of energy just to distribute the heat.

Selectman Aldo Caira spoke, siding strongly with those seeking to stop the opening of the Swain.

Other articles in the warrant included a proposal to turn a parcel of land off Aldrich Road over to the Conservation Commission, a proposal for installing a water main on Lee Street, and an article seeking to correct the action taken in a previous town meeting. Dennis Sullivan bought a parcel of land from the town, only to find that the description contained an error.

The fincom voted approval of the town manager's budget recommendations, and of the three articles.

Article 5 on the warrant is a proposal for a wetlands by-law. The Finance Committee voted to recommend tabling the article for further study.

Heavy vandalism at West Intermediate

For the third time in three weeks windows have been broken at the West Intermediate School.

Three weeks ago 52 windows were broken in two nights by persons using pellet guns. Two weeks ago vandals broke into the school, using a side door, broke 22 windows, and committed what is described as "general vandalism". A $3000 meat slicer, from the kitchen, was among the items stolen.

The worst of all jobs greeted the eyes of the Principal Bill Fay, when he arrived on the morning of September 2nd.

Over one hundred windows had been broken by baseball bats or similar weapons, both inside and out. All the fire extinguishers in the building had been carried down to one room, and there discharged onto walls and floor. Those fire extinguishers were then thrown out a window, which had not been opened first.

"I could have had another teacher, for what this is going to cost the town!" lamented Fay.

Fay was critical of the alarm system, which he said is not working. It had been made by a company that made lightning rods, he said.

Roy McClanahan, superintendent of public buildings, had had a company at the school last year, to propose a new alarm system. It was impossible to appropriate money at the annual town meeting because of the financial situation in Massachusetts.

Planning board says no to wetlands bylaw

The planning board, Tuesday night voted unanimously against the proposed wetlands bylaw. In a letter to the town manager, selectmen and town clerk the board said:

"It is the opinion of the planning board that this proposed bylaw adds additional restrictions to already restrictive laws."

The planning board concurs with town counsel and questions whether this bylaw would be upheld in court. Therefore we recommend disapproval."

In their discussion before the vote there were many points made. At the same time Arnold Blake spoke up to defend the members of the conservation commission. "Their job," he said, "is laid out by state law. It is not fair to criticize them."

Most of the discussion was by Lou Maglio and Arnold Blake, with Chairman John DeRoy joining in occasionally.

DeRoy pointed out that there had been no public hearings or discussion, before proposing the bylaw. He also said that the bylaw gives the conservation commission more power than any other board or committee in town, and will probably lead to all sorts of litigation.

Maglio believed there should be a zoning bylaw, instead of that proposed. It should be enforced, he said, by the building inspector instead of the police. He was critical of the definitions about a $25 fee, wanting to know if it was per dwelling, or per dwelling area in which there could be multiple dwellings.

Speaking of the portion of the proposed bylaw that defines wetlands Maglio said "This could break the back of some poor guy who was trying to put in a swimming pool."

Maglio also pointed out that there seemed to be no provision for the notification of abutters.

"If they are going to have rules and regulations," Maglio said, "they should have them in the bylaw."

Arnold Blake, trying to be gentle, argued the law should be "strict on legality." He wanted to know how one could tie the bylaw into the wetlands definitions. "They ought to be more specific."

Long goodbye for Tewksbury's German visitors

It was almost as though the airplane understood human sentiment during the long goodbye. After spending three weeks with their young counterparts from America, the group of visiting German students sponsored by Operation Friendship had to say goodbye to their Tewksbury hosts and hostesses at the end of last month.

In some cases they were tearful goodbys, as the younger girls bid each other adieu. The guys were also sad as their new found overseas friends were forced to go their separate ways. And the airplane seemed to understand. It tried to keep the young Germans in the United States for as long as it could.

They were slated to take off from Logan International Airport on a 2:45 p.m. flight to New York. From there they would catch a flight back to Germany. It didn't quite work out that way, thanks to an airplane engine that proved to be balky.

A group of 25 Tewksbury youngsters and about 50 adults were on hand at the airport. The Germans got on the plane, but at the 2:45 p.m. scheduled take off they were back on the ground.

The pilot would not take off with an engine that was kicking up. The engine was checked over and shortly thereafter everything seemed to be in order.

Goodbys were repeated. Again the young Germans climbed on board. Again the engine kicked up and would not perform.

It got to be a sort of joke after the process was repeated five times.

On the sixth goodbye, Edith Mehler, who had been a guest of the Kobelski family on Jay Street, added a phrase.

"Goodbye!" she said. "See you in five minutes!" But that time everything worked and the plane left the ground headed for New York.

The youngsters attended a social event the night before they were to leave at the Congregational Church. The evening started with a supper and ended with the visitors performing skits and games on stage.

Wrong way bus trip

The subject of their first skit mimicked the most memorable bus trip they took while here. On their way to Hampton Beach a few days earlier the driver got lost on Route 93. She eventually returned to Tewksbury and went to Hampton, via Route 495.

The youngsters, sitting on the platform as though they were riding in a bus, relived the trip. First they sat facing one direction, then turned themselves around to face the opposite direction. Wolfgang Stockl (left) gives his impression of the wrong way bus driver on a trip taken by visiting German students. The mimic was performed Saturday night at the Congregational Church before the ten students were to return to Germany.

One of the youths, Wolfgang Stockl from Barvaria, can be described as a live wire. He enjoyed himself and was able to give very graphic accounts of the events of the past few weeks.

Consequently, when the game of Choo-Choo Train was started everyone was waiting for Wolfgang to be the Caboose.

The game puts male and female players in line behind each other on an alternating basis. They then represent the cars of a train. The "engine" starts the line and the

Culinary Corner

by Virginia Parker Neville

Gourmets extol poached fish fillets for their delicate flavor and texture...soft fish, such as flounder, Boston sole, ocean perch, haddock, and cod, should be poached and served in the same skillet...this does away with the danger of fillets breaking when moved from pan to platter...however, sea bass, English sole, and pompano are firm enough to be transferred from skillet to platter if you like...after you've added liquid to fillets, cover with a circle of waxed paper, with small hole in the center...the hole allows steam to escape...by using this paper, you can cook fillets without drowning them in liquid, and you don't have to boil down liquid after fillets are done.

Bring the kids to WES PARKER'S SEAFOOD RESTAURANT. Our atmosphere is rustic and relaxed. ## letter to the editor

Dear Larz:

The League of Women Voters of Wilmington urges the voters of Wilmington to adopt the wetlands bylaw on the warrant of the special town meeting September 14.

At the present time, the town has no bylaw protecting the numerous wetlands in our area. This bylaw, modeled after those used by the state and other towns in Massachusetts, would oversee activities within one hundred feet of wetlands or within 100 feet of the 100 year storm line.

Located at the headwaters of the Ipswich River and Mystic Lakes, Wilmington has a chance to play a responsible role protecting these waters, its own groundwater, fisheries, wildlife, recreation and aesthetics as well as control of flooding and soil erosion, by adopting this law. In these days of low rainfall and short water supply, protection of our water supply is essential.

With the present short supply of money, this bylaw allows the Conservation Commission to adopt a fee structure for permits and wetlands hearings making this body less dependent on the town budget for monies.

The League urges voters to attend the September 14 town meeting and vote yes on Article 5.

Yours truly,
Eileen Labrie and Maureen Fredericks
co-presidents,
League of Women
Voters of Wilmington

Dear Larz:

I would like to protest the Tewksbury School Committee's recent decision to eliminate the practice of having bus stops on side streets for the primary grade students.

I understand the School Committee's sense of responsibility in trying to reduce cost by decreasing expenditures wherever possible. However, I feel that the Committee has a greater responsibility to the safety and welfare of the children, it governs.

There cannot be enough emphasis placed on the safety hazard that the town is creating by having children entering their first years of school waiting for a bus as much as a mile from their homes, on main streets which have no sidewalks or safe areas in which to wait, no crossing guards or other safety precautions. There has been no stipulation made for any adult supervision nor has any advance action been taken by the Committee to educate these children regarding the safety hazards incurred on main streets.

The bus routes in the past have been erratic due to poor weather resulting in treacherous driving conditions. This causes pick-up times to vary from day to day. As a result of this, our children could be outside in inclement weather on an already hazardous street for lengthy periods waiting for the bus to come. The wait will end with them having to face as much as another half hour riding on the bus while wet and cold.

It is also only fair to mention that commuters will be facing more difficult times traveling around town, since there will be large groups of children lingering at literally every corner and major intersection during the morning rush hour. These children will be standing on the streets for lack of any other place to wait and they will range in age from five to 18.

I realize that Proposition 2½ has created budget problems. However, the citizens voted for this law in the hope of a more responsible spending of the tax dollar. The elimination of side street bus stops is an extremely irresponsible and dangerous decision.

I would appreciate the School Committee's immediate reconsideration of this matter by way of an emergency School Committee meeting, open to the public for discussion and hopefully a reversal of this ill-judged decision which sacrifices the public safety of our youngest citizens.

Any town resident interested in joining in to help realign our school Committee priorities, please contact me at 851-3816.

Thank you,
Diane M. Buckley

Dear Larz:

My family has been part of this town for well over 100 years. I have never in my life seen such sneaky and underhandedness as I have seen in the past year. Upon attending a meeting held Sept. 2-81 7:00 p.m. I was shocked when I heard Mr. McClanahan state that he was not sure if there was lead paint in the Swain School, and how the Glen Road School at last year's meeting cost less to run than the Boutwell.

Now at a meeting held Sept. 2-81 the Glen Road somehow seems to cost more and Boutwell less. How convenient that a school in an area of greatest need seems more expensive all of the sudden and at who's expense? Our children's.

To take them from a school which they have loved and enjoyed, for many years and place them in a situation of which they have no control or say.

Same goes for the Boutwell, but at least they are being transferred to a facility which they know is lead free, has lunch room where they can eat and be able to smell what they are eating, and won't have a fear of it floating away. And were they won't have to were they won't have to were there wet suits to gym if the pump fails, and won't have to fear there san's returning from the bathroom if the boilers decide to blow there is no escape for them.

And they know that they meet modern standards, and don't fall victim to grandfather clauses, and were there are no ladders leading to attic were if climbed there child could fall down, not one but two flights of stairs and was at least inspected with in the past several years. Swains last posted inspection reads (1973). And hear no wonder its so cheap to run there is no heat on the first floor and no hot water any were, but there is heat on the second floor enough to make you think you were at the equator.

I hate to think how much this building is going to cost when the school faculty all start bring in there electric heaters and fans and think of the fire hazard that would create.

Maybe they have supplied us with the best of staff but what have they got against them, for that matter the children.

It looks like we the people don't have any say, for the time being. I hope all the people an all the boards just remember this. We the people pay your salary's, just remember that come election. You must think your pretty smart killing two birds with one stone.

(1st) by maintaining the Swain at our expense for your own underhanded perposes, and not touching your own municipal budget.

(2nd) by avoiding a law suit filed against the town by the principal who was demoted and now to shot this person up assigned her principal of the Swain. How convenient! How is it that sewage be so quickly put into the Glen Road School what are your plans or should I say underhanded plans for it now? And with Glen Road and Boutwell Schools closed these buildings will have to be heated and maintained during the course of the winter or systems drained, and with the buildings out of use they will fall victims to vandalism. And who's pocket is that going to come from. We the people have payed for these buildings and I think we should be able to decide what is done with them.

We elected you and put this town in your hands in our good faith hoping you would do right by us, but evidently your not capable of handling it so I think that its time we take over.

Dear Larz:

There has been no vote for Hud. There has been no vote for 774. Hostility and animosity left over from last year took away a distorted view of my proposal from the August 24 Housing Authority meeting. Since that time, the ball of hatred has started rolling and gathering momentum again. I hope this letter will stop it once and for all.

It is common knowledge that Wilmington's citizens voted down the Hud proposal back in Dec. 1980. It is common knowledge that I stated my views of being against that proposal. The Hud issue calling for 25 units of low and moderate income housing in the same area as the elderly units was not a wise proposal. With this I agree because of the prior history of this type of housing. This is definitely a dead issue and we should consider it done and over with.

What was brought to light during the summer, was the actual bending of the Hud guidelines which will allow the use of scattered site units instead of the clustered type, for low and moderate housing.

I am aware that many townspeople still do not like the idea of having to use Federal guidelines and Federal funds. I have also become aware that others feel scattered site units are much more acceptable than the original proposal. Since we are all tired of calling special town meetings, etc., I decided to settle the new Hud proposal in an economical and fair manner. My proposal was as follows:

We proposed that the Housing Authority submit a letter to the Board of selectmen on the Hud scattered site proposal for their study and opinion. At the same time I proposed we print up flyers for an opinion poll to be hand delivered by volunteers to all of our citizens to allow them a chance to answer questions and write down their opinions for housing needs. Example:

Do you favor Federal funding (Hud) for 80 units of elderly at Demoulas site, which would include 10 units for low income handicapped units on same site, but in a different building, and 15 units of scattered site low to moderate income units?

Yes—No—

Do you favor looking for private funds to build only elderly units without having to use federal guidelines?

Do you favor floating a bond to fund the building of elderly units?

Do we have a need for additional elderly housing units?

Do we need additional low and moderate income units in Wilmington?

Do you have an alternate plan from those proposed on this poll? Please explain...

This poll would be counted by a nonpartisan group to insure honesty.

Now I ask you, people of Wilmington - does this sound threatening to you?

Realizing the strong feelings between our chairman and certain of our citizens, maybe people at the meeting heard what they wanted to hear, but I give you my word as a gentleman that the preceding letter is true.

I have telephoned most of the individuals who submitted letters to the editor and explained this to them. I hope they will try to undue the damage done.

Respectfully,
Warren Newhouse
Wilmington Housing Authority

Dear Larz:

During the year 1980-81 I believe everyone will agree that there has been a traumatic change in the private housing sector. That change has involved new housing construction, high mortgage rates, high cost of existing housing, increased utility costs and incredible rents. According to the Wall Street Journal, an average cost of a home today is in an $80,000 range. The cost of mortgages as of August, 1981 for an FHA or VA buyer is 17.5 percent with nine points to the seller and one point to the buyer according to Charlestown Savings Bank. Rental units of one, two, three and four bedrooms, according to M.A.P.C. show acceptable rates of $329.00, $394.00, $458.00 and $519.00 respectively; which means the average cost to maintain a home is well in excess of $1,000.00 per month.

Taking this into consideration, coupled with other on-going expenses to sustain oneself, we can see the need for public housing being required by not only the very poor or elderly, but creeping well into the young family and middle income ranges. We base this on the 1980 Hud guidelines of Boston median income. This qualifies the following categories:

1 Person	7,650.00-12,200.00
2 Persons	8,700.00-13,950.00
3 Persons	9,800.00-15,700.00
4 Persons	10,900.00-17,450.00
5 Persons	11,750.00-18,550.00
6 Persons	12,650.00-19,600.00
7 Persons	13,500.00-20,700.00
8 Persons	14,400.00-21,800.00

The people who will be served have earnings in these ranges.

On August 24, 1981, at the meeting of the Wilmington Housing Authority, the Board saw fit to establish a residency preference. This preference would give people in the following categories a preference to obtain units that were available prior to any other applicants being considered.

1. Resident of the Town.
2. Persons employed in the Town.
3. Former resident of the Town.
4. Persons with relatives living in the Town.

These are the conditions as they exist today. In viewing these facts, the questions arise as to:

- How can the young residents of Wilmington obtain decent, affordable housing, not only today, but tomorrow?
- How can the elderly who supported the town for so many years, who are no longer in a competitive position to cope with the incredible high heating cost and soaring electricity costs, meet their housing needs today and tomorrow?

- How can the middle aged, one or two children family household provide for their basic needs and stay within Wilmington?

These are some of the questions that the members of the Housing Authority began to cope with in 1979, and some of the projections they reviewed when they looked into obtaining Federal funds for decent affordable housing. It is for this reason that they continued to pursue the only funds that were made available to Wilmington in over 20 years; and it is because they have a sincere desire to see that critically needed housing be constructed in such a way that it will blend into the community without altering the esthetics or the social aspects of the community.

For those who criticize the efforts of the board, we ask that they propose solutions better than those solutions that are sought for by the board without significant added cost to the taxpayers.

Sincerely,
George W. Hooper,
Chairman of the Board

Dear Larz:

Hush! Hush! "Glen Road and Boutwell schools are synonyms for the pneumonic plague." No one will talk about them." That is what a school committee member replied when asked why the school committee did not reconsider opening them. Thank you for this enlightenment.

Of course this was obvious to all who attended the Finance Committee meeting September 2. Facts and figures fell on deaf ears. The school committee was unyielding.

At least now we know it's due to the epidemic. Glen Road and Boutwell are dying, slowly and painfully, by some great force apparently out of our control. In Wilmington, it is leaving a path of vacant buildings to be taken over at some future date, and striking down the innocent.

What force is this that is closing doors, schools, and mouths? It's a disease on the rampage. Call the doctor! better yet, call the housing authority.

Signed:
Hopefully Immuned

Dear Larz:

It is unfortunate that the Swain School opening has surfaced on the political forum the week before school is to open.

Even more unfortunate is that where there is politics there is always a political opportunist to step in and fan the flames of misunderstanding and discontent. This seems to be the situation with the Swain School.

Granted the building is old and in some aspects of housing students of kindergarten and grade school age is less than to be desired in the physical. However, in making this decision the School Committee, after many hours of study, decided this was the best avenue to travel to assure quality education to as many students as possible in light of the recent budget cuts.

I have attended school committee meetings and find these people to be dedicated to the quality education of Wilmington children. We are fortunate to have Dr. Carol Sager in an administrative position during this financial crisis. She is a gifted and talented woman with considerable knowledge of the educational process and what it takes to achieve quality education for our children.

This building is safe and no responsible person would seriously believe the School Committee or Dr. Sager would knowingly subject any child to a dangerous situation. They have been assured by the maintenance department that this school is safe. Corrections have, and were being made to add cosmetic improvement to the building. • •

The editorial page of the Town Crier last week in reference to Dr. Sager's career, in balance on this issue, was shallow and misleading. I hope before town meeting you will do what you can to correct this injustice.

Anne D. Linehan

Don't shoot the schools

Wilmington's special town meeting on Monday night promises to be a lively session. Article 1 is a supplementary appropriation, including $309,000 for the school budget. This added money for the schools would allow smaller class sizes at the elementary level.

Presently in Wilmington there is some sentiment toward voting no on that budget item. A large group of parents is upset because their children will be sent to the Swain School, a 67-year-old building. Much of the $309,000 will be used to pay the teachers who will staff that building.

The people at the Finance Committee hearing Wednesday night heard many concerns expressed. They also heard many of them answered. There is no asbestos in the building. The paint that is peeling is not lead-based paint, according to the Supt. of Public Buildings, Roy Mc

Clanahan.

One very important question is: What is the record of the building? How many children have been hurt there? The answer is: No more than in any other building.

Parents have a right, in fact almost an obligation to be concerned for the welfare of their children. But they also have to be able to decide on the best course of action for their children, once the facts are in.

The thought of denying the school appropriation might seem good at first. Such a reaction is almost understandable. But anyone who really cares about the education of Wilmington's children will vote for the $309,000 at the special town meeting Monday night. To deny the appropriation would be to use the entire school population of 3900 youngsters as pawns.

MOUTH BREATHING PROBLEMS

Occasionally, you may notice a youngster who cannot breathe through his nose and uses his mouth for all his breathing.

This may not seem abnormal - but it is, and can lead to a lot of future dental problems if not stopped early.

What causes mouth breathing?

This habit is usually caused by enlarged tonsils and/or adenoids. (The adenoids are tonsils hidden above the throat and behind the palate.) When infected, they can enlarge and block breathing through the nasal passage. The child will gasp for air through his mouth.

Mouth breathing can lead to a host of dental problems such as "back teeth," weak jaw, and dried-out gums that are susceptible to irritation and periodontal (gum) disease.

A public service to promote better dental health.

The Red Cross Service operates according to its philosophy of "Community Responsibility" - that the healthy in the community provide blood for the sick with no tangible reward attached to the blood donation.

Because "community responsibility" works, an individual who needs blood no longer suffers the emotional pressure of finding a replacement donor or the financial pressure of a non-replacement fee. Blood is available to all who need it regardless of their income, their place of residence, their membership in a specific group, or their donation history.

Of course, the success of this program depends on the willingness of the community to accept the responsibility to donate blood.

First aid course

If your child fell, got into a bicycle accident or was burned, would you know how to administer the best medical treatment before going to the emergency room?

Parents and teachers are encouraged to enroll in the Regional Health Center in Wilmington's American Red Cross Standard First Aid course to be held on Wednesdays September 16, 23 and 30 from 7:00 to 9:30 p.m., sponsored by the Community Health Education Department.

This multimedia course uses a combination of film, practice and workbook on a variety of topics, including: chokesaving, mouth-to-mouth breathing, wounds, animal bites and tetanus, fractures and sprains, effects of heat and cold, emergency rescue and transfer and shock.

Those who complete the eight-hour course receive American Red Cross certificates which are valid for three years. Enrollment is limited to the first 12 registrants who pay the $15 fee.

For those who are only interested in learning chokesaving, a one and one-half hour course will be offered on Thursday, Sept. 24 from 9-10:30 a.m., including film, demonstration and practice. There is a $2 registration fee.

These courses will be taught by Mrs. Eleanor Entin, R.N., B.S., staff health educator at the Regional Health Center in Wilmington. Mrs. Entin is a certified instructor trainer in cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) and certified in First Aid.

For applications and registration information, call the Regional Health Center at 657-3910, ext. 567.

By knowing first aid and chokesaving, you can be of help to your family and community, and perhaps even save a life.

State treasurer has bankbook funds

State Treasurer Robert Q. Crane has announced that his office will attempt to return more than $800,000 to 6,000 Massachusetts residents under the state's unclaimed money law.

Treasurer Crane noted the money has been turned over to the state coffers by insurance companies operating within the state.

Included in the proceeds are unpaid life insurance benefits, unpaid endowments on term insurance and unpaid benefits on health and liability insurance policies.

According to the treasurer, more than 90 percent of the accounts in question represent the cash value of term life insurance policies. "Many owners of these policies may not realize they are entitled to claim," Crane said.

Under the state's unclaimed money law (M.G.L. c200A) accounts which have been unclaimed for seven years are declared abandoned and turned over to the treasury. Treasurer Crane's office then tries to locate the rightful owners.

Individual entitlements from these unclaimed insurance accounts range from $25 to a high of $21,000. According to the treasurer, more than 4,000 accounts have between $25 and $100; more than one thousand accounts have between $100 and $500; one hundred and fifty unclaimed accounts have between $500 and $1000; seventy-plus accounts have between $1,000 and $5,000; three have between $5,000 and $10,000, and one account has more than $10,000.

A total of 10 residents and businesses from this area have unclaimed money in accounts. These residents are urged to contact the office of the State Treasurer Robert Q. Crane, 12th floor, McCormack Building, 1 Ashburton Pl., Boston. The telephone number at the treasury office is 523-1042, or 1-800-632-8027.

The ten from this area are Joseph Bernier, Kerry C.F. Gaulder, Sumner Gladstone and McKinnon Contracting.

Also, Mary McMenimen, Donald G. Tanner, Shirley G. Simpson, Geoffrey A. Weiner Jr. and Michael D. Weiner.

Spotlighters' new home

Wilmington selectmen on Tuesday night agreed to lease the old Mildred Rogers School to the Wilmington Spotlighters for use as a community theater workshop. Holding a model of the school are Spotlighters President Celia Barlotti and Jean Doucette, whose husband made the model.

Windmill application withdrawn

A petition to the Wilmington Board of Appeals for a variance to allow the construction of an AW wind turbine was withdrawn, Tuesday night, without prejudice. Such a withdrawal allows the petitioner to again apply to the board of appeals.

The attorney was James Feld of Woburn. Mr. Feld had asked for a variance, but not for a special permit.

William Hooper, planning board member, pointed out the omission. Hooper also expressed himself as doubtful that the board of appeals could grant the appeal, as it is not allowed in the zoning bylaws. Anything not allowed, he said, quoting the late Philip Buzzell, "is not permitted."

The wind turbine is planned to operate in winds as low as seven miles an hour, and is being promoted by the Preston Fuel Company of Lowell. It was to be proposed for a 65 foot tower, at the end of McDonald Road, 240 feet beyond the last dwelling.

The land is owned by Ventura Canals, and it was for Mr. Canals that Mr. Feld was appearing.

Preseason opener

The Wilmington High School football squad broke their Freedom, N.H. camp with a scrimmage at Nashua High School Saturday morning. Clockwise, quarterback Ted Moran fires a pass, as head coach John Ritchie looks on; a concerned AD Jim Gillis watches as tri-captain Craig Richards (23) is helped from the field with a broken ankle; and defensive end Jeff Linehan (82) sacks the Nashua quarterback.

Chargers tackle Dracut Sunday

The Wilmington Chargers A, B and C travelling teams will open Merrimack Valley Conference play Sunday, Sept. 13 when they travel to Dracut to tackle the Middies at the Dracut High School field. The C game is scheduled for 11 a.m., followed by the B clash at 12:30 p.m., with the A contest kicking off at 2 p.m.

The Chargers travelled to Waltham Monday to open their season with a non-league encounter against the Suburban League champions of a year ago.

The C squad dropped the opening game of the tripleheader, 19-6. The Chargers did not get on the scoreboard until late into the final quarter when halfback Steve Jackson raced 24 yards around right end for the score. Fine running performances were turned in by fullback Steve Fuller along with Jackson. Defensive standouts were Wayne Poirier and Danny Woods, each with an interception of a Waltham aerial.

The B squad dropped the second game of the day, 27-6. The lone Charger touchdown was scored by Bobby Cole on a quarterback keeper midway through the second quarter. Two fine receptions by receiver Bill Gullage highlighted the B offensive attack.

In the final contest of the afternoon, the A squad dropped a 26-0 decision to the Watch City squad. The defending Boston Suburban 1980 champions looked strong, as they scored in each of the four periods.

Ken Ferrari and Pete Campbell played well for the Charger A squad.

Sticker drive Saturday

The Wilmington Pop Warner annual sticker drive will be held Saturday, Sept. 12 throughout the town.

The 200 youngsters representing the Pop Warner organization, including players and cheerleaders, will be calling on the neighborhoods seeking the assistance of all Wilmington residents to help the Pop Warner program meet its obligations and goals for the 1981 season.

The Wilmington Pop Warner organization would like to express its appreciation to all Wilmington residents for their generosity in support of the sticker drive in the past, and seeks their assistance again this year to assure a successful season for the participating youngsters in the 1981 Pop Warner gridiron season.

Howard MVC Pop Warner president

Len Howard, a former president of Wilmington Chargers Pop Warner, was recently elected to the presidency of the Merrimack Valley league of the Pop Warner Football organization.

He is currently the athletic program director for the Wilmington Chargers Pop Warner Youth Football, and represents that organization on the Merrimack Valley League Board. Len is also a member of the board of the Youth Football Conference of Eastern Mass. (YFCM).

As the president of the Merrimack Valley League, Len will be providing an interface between the YFCM and the league, as well as providing organizational leadership for Chelmsford, Dracut, Methuen, Lawrence, Billerica, Sudbury, Tewksbury and Wilmington, the towns currently in the Merrimack Valley League.

Len's affiliation with Wilmington Pop Warner started in 1975 when he was a coach for the intramural Dolphins team.

The entire Howard family has been active in the Wilmington program. His sons, Lenny and Greg, played football for the Wilmington Chargers, and Lenny is now working as a coach trainee. His wife Kathy was active as a member of the Board of Directors and served as secretary during one term of office.

As the retiring president of Wilmington Pop Warner, Howard was instrumental in obtaining a playing field for the local teams, obtaining medical support and EMT assistance for all of the home games, and promoting the growth of the local teams. During his term in Wilmington, that franchise expanded its traveling football teams to include a C team, while still maintaining a training intramural level comprised of three to four teams depending on the enrollments.

Len also served as a member of the Board of Directors for six years, and the president for five of those years.

Softball volunteers

Wilmington Little League Softball needs a volunteer for the Board of Directors as Player Agent and Vice President. This position will be open for the 1982 season due to the retirement of Barbara Carpenter.

It is a position that must be filled in order to maintain a continuing softball program. This position must be filled at the annual meeting in early October. Although there is a great deal of interest in the softball league, there is a comparatively small number of people willing to help.

If you would like more information, call Jeanne Meuse at 658-4354.

Tewksbury Pop Warner

Redmen blitz Wakefield

The Tewksbury Pop Warner A and B teams unloaded on new opponent Wakefield, as the Redmen A team posted a 28-0 victory and the Tewksbury B squad began defense of its MVC title with a 27-0 win Sunday at Ballou-DelRossi Field.

In the A game, Tewksbury struck for two quick scores in the first period, as Joe Indelicato and Ken Coviello each logged a TD, and Jim Evangelista booted a PAT for a 14-0 lead.

In the second stanza, quarterback Robbie Aylward notched Tewksbury's third TD on a quarterback sneak. This score was set up by fine runs from Joe Vecchi and Joe Indelicato. The PAT was blocked and sailed wide of its mark. Tewksbury's last score of the day was the result of a bad Wakefield snap on a punt that Tewksbury recovered at the Wakefield 10 yard line. From there, Mike Mackey got the call and banged in from six yards out. Jim Evangelista then added the two points on a perfect PAT kick.

Playing fine games for Tewksbury were Greg Kobelski, who hauled in two Aylward passes. The Redmen defense was primed by Phil Loder, Mike Mackey, Pat Doherty and David Lindsey.

Tim Boudreau led the Tewksbury B team attack, as he chipped in with two TD's and some fine running. Boudreau's first score came in the first period, as he banged off tackle for a five yard TD. Jeff Larsen added the PAT via the run to give the Redmen a 7-0 lead. The second Redmen TD was also scored by Boudreau, as he ran in from eight yards out after Tewksbury recovered a muffed punt at the Wakefield 15 yard line.

Jeff Larsen again added the point. The third Tewksbury score came after Brian Aylward intercepted a Wakefield pass at the Indian's 35 yard line and returned it to the one. Quarterback Jay Goldrick carried it in on the next play from scrimmage. Larsen again added the point for the 21-0 lead at halftime.

Tewksbury's second offense took over in the second half, and they added the fourth TD on fine runs by Kevin O'Brien, Bobby Long and John O'Keefe, capping the drive with a 12 yard sweep by Johnny DeVivo. The PAT try failed.

Defensive stars for the Redmen were Brian Aylward, Bobby Briggs, Mike Healy and Bob Byers.

Both Tewksbury teams travel to Methuen this Sunday for their MVC opener with the Rangers at the Methuen High School Field. The B game starts at 12:30 p.m., and the A game follows at 1:45.

second period safety. In Sunday's contest, the Cherokee dropped the Sioux, 12-0 in another hard fought game.

The Mohawk sported a balanced attack, as their scoring honors were spread out among Jim Simas, Bob Perry and Scott DeVivo, all notching a TD apiece. Tom Higgins and Scott DeVivo picked up the two extra points for the Blue and Gold. The Apache TD was scored by Tommy Aylward, who also logged the PAT. Also playing well for the Apache was Shawn Surghrue.

The Pawnee picked up their only points in the second quarter, as Brian Higgins sacked the Navajo quarterback in the end-zone for the safety. Scott Gaynor anchored the purple defense and Jim Anzivino led the Pawnee offensive attack. The Navajo received an outstanding passing game from quarterback Brian Ward.

The Cherokee beat the Sioux on a 30 yard bootleg TD run by quarterback Jay Rideout and a one yard dive by halfback Sal Bagnulo. The Cherokee played an excellent defensive game, with Lee Sala, Rich Howard, Jeff Rideout and Robbie Polimeno leading the way. The Sioux bright spots were sparked by the passing combo of quarterback Hugh Fitzpatrick and receiver Bobby Busch, who made some spectacular catches in traffic.

The In-town League returns to action this Saturday at Ballou-DelRossi Field as the Cherokee take on the Pawnee in the 9 a.m. game and the Sioux battle the Apache in the second contest Sunday's 9 a.m. game will match up the Mohawk and the revitalized Navajo.

First week standings

Cherokee	1-0-0
Mohawk	1-0-0
Pawnee	1-0-0
Apache	0-1-0
Navajo	0-1-0
Sioux	0-1-0

'Stonewalling' leaves unanswered questions on WHS 'hazing' incident

by Rick Cooke

The Wilmington High School athletic department is currently attempting to deal with a pair of problems, one of which is considerably more important than the other.

Problem number one - the more important of the two, is how to deal with the fact that three Wilmington High School football seniors have been suspended from the team pending an investigation of an 'initiation' prank that got out of hand at the team's Freedom, New Hampshire camp Friday night, resulting in the injury of a sophomore player, who was apparently kneed in the groin when he resisted the traditional 'hazing' ceremony.

Obviously, this is a team problem that should be handled by head coach John Ritchie and his staff. Both Ritchie and Athletic Director Jim Gillis come from the old school of hard-line discipline, where the school's athletes play by the rules or they take a hike.

The WHS sports philosophy -
"We must bear in mind that low standards of sportsmanship undermine the entire school program of citizenship education. Therefore, our principal objective will be to promote sound activities in athletics, competition directed in the best interest of the student, the school, and the community."

W.H.S. Code of Ethics

Gillis and other high school athletic directors have distributed athletic codes of ethics and philosophies that must be signed by each athlete, and hopefully adhered to. Excerpts from the Wilmington High School athletic department's code of ethics appear in this column.

Most athletes are sincere in their direction, and will follow such a code for the most part. But in the Wilmington philosophy, there appear to be several standards that smack with a pie in the sky, an athlete should strive for the perfect life mentality, that is beyond the reach of many youngsters, and rightfully so.

It's tough to "meet all life with a smile." There are days when many of us think that life is pretty much of a rotten deal.

But, there is nothing wrong with setting high athletic standards, just as long as the administration is willing to admit that mistakes can be made occasionally.

Having this athletic code is important, but the question should be asked, that if three persistent trouble makers pulled such a prank, would they get the same benefit of the doubt that some athletes get? Would the non-athlete be either open to such ridicule or given another chance to live up to the code?

The athlete's problem is that he or she is a very visible member of the community, and that is an added burden to bear for having your team and your name splashed across the Sunday papers.

Ritchie coached, while Gillis has played and coached for a rather famed disciplinarian in former WHS football coach Fred Bellissimo, so it's no surprise that both men wish to clean the team's dirty laundry in the privacy of the system, and not air it in public where it might fester and snowball thanks to the rumors and innuendo that can abound in a town the size of Wilmington.

Such hearsay is just what has apparently driven both Ritchie and Gillis to the boiling point. When I attempted to clear up some of the rumors with some pointed questions Tuesday morning, I was greeted with an angry display from both men, complete with plenty of finger pointing and reasons why I had better keep my mouth shut and the lid on the problem, that according to sources, is not unusual for the Wildcats preseason Freedom, N.H. camp.

Ritchie and Gillis thought that they had taken steps to correct the problems of the past with some adjustments at this summer camp, but the players apparently let what is often termed 'normal' behavior for young athletes winding down from a week of hard work get out of hand Friday night.

Still, Gillis saw no good in reporting what happened, offering repeatedly "this is off the record," while being backed by his coach Ritchie, who said, "you want me to say something? - no comment."

"A real athlete is always a lady or gentleman. He/she who plays fair in the strenuous game of life; who is clean of body, mind and soul; who associates with honest people; who is courteous to friend and foe; who is too chivalrous to wound the feelings of others, and too sensible to lower his respect for oneself; whose hopes and dreams are founded on the rock of determination; who looks you straight in the eye; who meets victory without boasting; defeat without bitterness; and all life with a smile; who loves their friends, their country, and their God, and is a lady or a gentleman."

W.H.S. Code of Ethics

Therein lies problem number two with this particular athletic department. Stonewalling, plenty of stonewalling. When told of the reaction by Ritchie and Gillis Tuesday morning, one Wilmington High School teacher could only respond with a nod of the head in somewhat resigned agreement that this was typical behavior.

Got something good to say about Wilmington High School athletics? Fine, go ahead and blast the trumpets, but let even a seemingly minor high school prank get out of hand, and it's batten down the hatches, for this is athletics, and this athletic program is sacred and should be protected at the cost of not answering some simple questions.

I probably would have dropped this whole thing had it not been for the verbal blasting and threats that I received while standing just outside of Gillis' office Tuesday morning.

A simple, "the incident is under investigation," would have sent me back to the office to write a simple National Football League predictions column.

But, and this isn't the first time that WHS sports has pulled this bad news is no news routine - I was met with angry tones, told that I should just write about what goes on during the games each Saturday, and sent back to my typewriter to behave like a good little sportswriter.

My questions were designed to inform the people of Wilmington about a public program that is paid for by public funds. Ritchie may not think that his football program rivals the Big Ten, but I can find more than a couple of carloads of diehard WHS football fans who have their respective moods altered for the entire week if the Wildcats have lost a football game the previous Saturday.

Contrary to the opinions offered by Ritchie and Gillis Tuesday, what happens off the field plays a very large part in just how a game proceeds that Saturday - and sportswriting is not simply game descriptions and statistics.

In other words, I'm not going to report just what the Wilmington High School Athletic Department wants to see in print each week. I am a reporter, not a public relations specialist, and what went on Tuesday morning stirred my reporter's sense and got me asking questions - "if the problem is well on its way to being solved and its case closed, then why are these people so upset?"

Why does Ritchie ask if I'm going to go up to Tewksbury to check on coach Bob Aylward's players and what they do before and after games? Does he think that I won't? Wrong John, the Tewksbury coaches know that I'm not out to get anyone, and that I'm a reporter first and a former football player second.

Gillis was keen on the idea that as a former player, I should know that publicizing a situation like the current one at WHS can only hurt a school's sports program.

Wilmington High School is proud of its athletes and of the athletic teams which represent the school in competition. There is no doubt that the athlete carries the image of his school to the entire community, and to other communities he comes in contact with to a greater degree than the non-athlete.

W.H.S. Code of Ethics

True, as a player I always expected that a team problem would be handled from within that structure. But, I always understood that it was the media's job to report, period.

Perhaps if the press had mentioned the past Freedom, N.H. hijinks (even if they were relatively minor) then this last episode never would have occurred. People have a way of watching their steps if an embarrassing or disturbing incident is made public. I know that I have gone that route, and have taken steps to correct the situation, simply because it was publicly embarrassing.

A mistake like the one that happened last Friday night is not unusual, especially among high school athletes, college fraternities and like organizations.

What makes this and any incident like it worth reporting is that, on a number of occasions in recent years, 'initiation' or 'hazing' ceremonies have gotten so out of hand that the recipient of such rights has died.

Perhaps if a comparatively minor incident such as Friday night's is reported, the school will take additional steps to correct the problem and avoid the dreaded bad publicity in the future.

But, if the athletes are more concerned with covering their tracks, and the administration is geared to stonewalling the media and whitewashing the situation, then is there any real hope for cutting short a prank that could have resulted in a more serious injury?

Granted, this is not big time football as Ritchie pointed out Tuesday. I'm sorry if I don't cover the New England Patriots, but to me, the welfare and development of high school athletes is just as important, if not more so, than the actions and quotes of some professional football player.

With the effects of Proposition 2½ still swirling around most high school sports programs and an important Wilmington town meeting scheduled for next Monday night (Sept. 14), naturally the school's administrators want to avoid any undue so-called bad press.

But, this is not a first time occurrence, it is a situation that can easily be handled from within the coaching staff, but - it is still a situation that bears some mention in this sports section, because it can effect the team and its performance on the field.

"All our athletes are expected to abide by the following":

1. Athletic Code of Ethics
2. Exemplary Conduct.
3. Presentable grooming and attire
4. Respect for others
5. Develop healthful living habits
6. Observe the regulations made by the coach

W.H.S. Code of Ethics

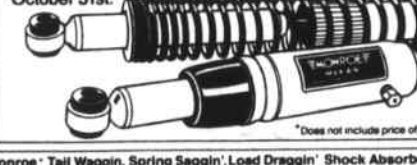

Maybe the fact that the prank occurred on the Friday before the Wildcats' scrimmage with Nashua High School had something to do with why Nashua ran up a 26-0 advantage before Wilmington scored, and maybe it didn't. First scrimmages generally aren't solid yardsticks for judging any football team. The team did not however, play particularly inspired football.

Ritchie's claim of: "there's nothing going on, forget it," just didn't wash. Something did go on, coach, and you and I shouldn't forget it. Your players are the people who might respond to such intimidation, not this reporter.

School bus route changes

Due to sewer construction on Cunningham Street in the Glen Road area, the Wilmington school bus number four which is scheduled to take students from Faulkner and Cunningham to the Woburn Street School will be changed as follows:

The bus will proceed up Faulkner Avenue as far as Faulkner and Sudbury. Students in that vicinity should board the bus at this point. Bus number four will then turn around and go back out Faulkner Avenue and to the school via Glen Road. Students who live on the upper end of Cunningham or Lexington Street should walk out to the corner of Salem Street and Cunningham Street at which point they will board bus number 11.

As soon as the construction is completed bus number four will go back to its original schedule as listed in last week's paper.

Bus 3-2 was incorrectly printed in last week's schedule. This bus will be going to the High School from the Nichols Street area, not to the West Intermediate School.

Lunch prices increase

Starting with the first day of school on Wednesday, September 9, 1981, lunch prices for the Wilmington Public Schools will be as follows:

Eighty cents (.80) for the regular lunch which includes milk; 40 for the reduced price lunch; 15 for milk by itself; and .15 for dessert.

The increase from last year's prices is due to three factors - (1) the removal of all school subsidy of the lunch program due to Proposition 2½; (2) the reduction of federal subsidy of school lunches due to President Reagan's budget cuts; (3) inflation in food costs.

Wilmington police news

The seven arrests made by members of Wilmington's Police Department last week included one early Saturday morning when Officers King and Venuti charged two youths with possession of alcohol while under age.

William Wormstead of 10 Oak Street and Bernard Cote of Wiley Place Wakefield were both charged with the liquor violation and were bailed for appearance in court Monday morning.

Monday afternoon Officer McCue investigated an accident on Boutwell Street in which a vehicle driven by a Tewksbury youth struck two trees after skidding out of control near Roosevelt Road.

The operator of the vehicle, Joseph McAllister of Shawshen Street, Tewksbury was cited for operating to endanger and speeding.

Early Friday morning Officers Venuti and Waterhouse responded to a request for assistance made by North Reading Officers in stopping a truck on Route 62.

When the truck finally stopped the operator and two passengers were arrested. Richard Williamson of Fairway Drive, Merrimack, N.H. was charged with operating after suspension of his license and failing to stop for a police officer.

William Nelson of Great Road, Littleton was charged with possession of marijuana and underage possession of alcohol. Steven Ellis of Dahna Drive, Littleton was also charged with underage possession of alcohol.

Early Sunday evening Officer Jepson arrested Paul J. Suprenant of King Street Wilmington and charged him with possession of a controlled substance.

Also arrested at the same time was Donald J. Ahearn of Boutwell Street, for operating under the influence of alcohol and possession of a class D substance with intent to sell.

Police investigated a total of nine accidents last week along with 27 disturbances, 12 larcenies, and 15 incidents of suspicious activity.

Six protective custody detentions were made, one trespassing and two trailbike complaints were logged, 16 alarms were checked out and three assault and battery incidents were investigated.

Seven break and entries were reported and checked, two stolen vehicles were recovered, three threat complaints were taken along with six traffic complaints and 13 incidents of vandalism were investigated.

Wilmington senior topics

Council meeting Monday

Monday, Sept. 14 the Council on Aging will be holding its meeting at the Drop-in Center at 6:15 p.m. The seniors will go directly to Wilmington High School after this meeting, where they will attend the special town meeting which will begin at 7:30. It is hoped that all seniors will be at this meeting as it will effect this year's Council on Aging budget.

Silver haired election

The Silver Haired election will be held at the Drop-in Center on Thursday, Sept. 15. Voting will be between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. This year there are two seniors running for office in the Silver Haired Legislature. Bill Strob will be seeking reelection as Silver Haired Representative and Margaret Pellegrino will be making a bid for the office of senator. Margaret will be representing Senator Buell in the Silver Haired Senate if elected and Bill will be the counterpart of Rep. Miceli in the Silver Haired House of Representatives.

Both candidates are working hard on issues important to the elderly. The Silver Haired Legislature last year was instrumental in submitting to the Mass. House and Senate many bills which were passed in favor of senior citizens.

To have two seniors elected to the Silver Haired Legislature would be an excellent advantage for the elderly of Wilmington to make their needs known.

Shut-ins, where are you?

Not enough shut-in seniors have indicated an interest in the special senior shut-in luncheon which will be held in the Recreation Hall on Deming Way.

The luncheon will be held Friday, Sept. 18 from noon to 3 p.m. Seniors will make arrangements for transportation of shut-ins to the luncheon and home again. In order to make arrangements, it is necessary to know how many would like to attend. Call the Center at 657-7595 - 658-2258 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Exercise classes

The exercise classes will be held at the Knights of Columbus Hall on Monday mornings from 11 a.m. to noon. These exercise classes are oriented to elderly persons. Liz Magee plans her classes to help seniors. She had a good size class last year, but would welcome many more.

Heating oil —

There's plenty and prices are stable

By Ward Morehouse III

Like thousands of other American homeowners, you may be about to buy your first shipment of home heating oil for this coming winter. And like many people you may be surprised to find that the current price is not much higher — maybe even a few cents lower, depending on where you live — than it was toward the end of last winter's heating season.

Unlike food and housing costs, which helped push consumer prices to the double-digit range last month, heating oil costs have remained relatively stable in recent months, according to the US Department of Energy (DOE), the National Oil Jobbers Council (NOJC), representing 8,000 oil suppliers, and analysts such as Warren Shimmerlik of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc.

But while supplies are expected to remain abundant, barring an extremely harsh winter or some unforeseen change in the world oil situation, new doubts are being raised about the outlook for prices.

Most US oil refiners, even with supplies somewhat lower than they were this time last year, figure they can easily meet the demand of an unusually cold winter because of the added "safety catch" of being able to increase their refining capacity far beyond current levels.

At the same time, supplies of natural gas and propane also are plentiful, according to industry analysts.

Analysts are divided over how high the price of home heating oil will rise this winter. The range of predictions is somewhere between a low of 6 cents a gallon and a high of more than 20 cents a gallon. But one thing is certain, they say: The recent failure of OPEC (Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries) oil ministers to agree on a uniform price hike will help hold down prices, at least until the next OPEC meeting in January. There is optimism, too, among some analysts that gasoline prices could even dip some more.

"We have distillate (home heating oil) coming out of our ears," said Donald F. Sands, general manager of operations for Amoco, describing the supply situation.

"There shouldn't be any problem with meeting demand from our standpoint," agreed Gerald Bradley, a spokesman for Gulf Oil Corporation in Houston.

"Barring any major disruption, supplies look adequate for this heating season," added a Shell Oil Company spokesman, whose was echoed by an Exxon spokesman.

"We don't anticipate any kinds of (supply) problems," offered David Morehead of the NOJC.

However, Dr. William Skinner of DOE warned that there was always the possibility of spot shortages developing on a localized basis "especially if we have an extremely cold and early winter." It should be pointed out, he added, that spot shortages did develop in scattered parts of the nation during last January's extreme cold spell, although this was mainly a distribution as opposed to a supply problem, with normal deliveries curtailed.

In the immediate aftermath of the severe shortages of gasoline in the spring of 1979 — shortages first attributed to the Iranian oil embargo but later to the DOE's own ineptitude — the Carter administration set a national target of 240 million barrels of middle distillates to be on hand by Oct. 1, 1979. The oil industry easily surpassed this goal and reached almost 247 million barrels by the end of October.

This year, the DOE's most recent "fourth quarter" price forecast of the national average cost of a gallon of home heating oil ranges from a low of $1.22 cents to a high of $1.43. But Dr. Skinner, the technical expert within the department who helped draw up these figures, says his best estimate would be "closer to $1.28." This would be almost 7 cents higher than DOE's most recent figure (as of May) for the average national price.

Mr. Shimmerlik of Merrill Lynch says heating oil will probably rise a few cents in October and later "possibly as much as 5 cents," if OPEC oil ministers raise oil prices in January as some analysts believe.

But even if he is right, these increases will not result in a price hike of nearly 10 cents a gallon like the one that happened from January to February of this year because of a OPEC price hike and the Reagan administration's decontrol of domestic crude oil.

One factor widely expected to help keep distillate oil prices "soft" is increased competition that may result from shifts of oil customers to cheaper gas heat.

However, there is some evidence that fewer people may switch from oil to gas this year. A spokesman for Brooklyn Union Gas Company, the largest supplier of gas heat in New York City, says oil marketers have been using "scare tactics" to keep customers from switching, warning that gas prices will skyrocket if price decontrol legislation pending in Congress passes.

Taken out at a ballgame

Last week we had the opportunity to take in our first Red Sox game since the baseball strike ended, and here's a capsule look at our evening:

We drove into town early, so we'd be able to find a legal parking space before the rush and have time to prep ourselves at the Cask & Flagon. The weather turned. A brisk wind blew in off the ocean and a light mist whirled round like salt shaken at a windy cookout. The grey firmament gave the lower half of Boston's skyline (the top half was obscured by the low overcast) a dull, almost murky look. It felt more like mid-October than the first of September. We were even dressed for fall: long sleeve shirts and pullover sweaters.

The weather wasn't the only hint that fall was coming: on our way to the park via Beacon Street we had to stop numerous times as the traffic slowly wound through Avis Rent-A-Trucks and

Caffeine hiding in the fizz

By Alf Siewers

Hold on to your hammock. That cold soda you're sipping may not be as "soft" as you think.

Some consumer groups and food scientists are concerned because Americans are drinking large amounts of caffeinated soda, often without even realizing it.

Many of the most popular soft drinks contain varying quantities of caffeine, a stimulant that the US Food and Drug Administration (FDA) considers a drug. Small amounts of caffeine occur naturally in cola nuts, which form the basis for many cola-flavored drinks. But some manufacturers add greater amounts of caffeine to their drink recipes, saying that it enhances the flavor.

Some experts, saying that caffeine is first and foremost a stimulant, are voicing concerns about caffeine, especially its effect on children, and are prompting action by consumer groups. Several organizations are conducting research, informing the public, and even lobbying for a ban on caffeine in soda pop.

Per capita soft drink consumption in the US has increased from 132 12-ounce servings in 1960 to 400 in 1980, according to the National Soft Drink Association. A 12-ounce can of caffeinated soda has about one-third of the caffeine in a 5-ounce cup of coffee, but can equal the effects of a cup of tea.

"You can develop a caffeine habit...it's mildly addictive," says Dr. Edward Groth, director of public service projects at the Consumers' Union, which is conducting a study of caffeine in soft drinks to appear in the October issue of Consumer Reports.

"You certainly can suffer withdrawal symptoms from drinking large amounts," even from soda drinks, Dr. Groth says.

Dr. Groth says he knows about the effects of caffeine from personal experience, explaining that he used to drink cola soft drinks by the six-pack. Sometimes when the drink was unavailable, he says that he would experience various physical and mental effects, which he likens to withdrawal symptoms.

He says that he quit drinking cola when he concluded that these problems, and especially a difficulty in sleeping, might be related to caffeine in his drink.

"I just stopped, and started drinking ginger ale" and decaffeinated beverages, Dr. Groth says.

Not just colas and "pepper" drinks (Dr. Pepper, Mr. Pibb) have caffeine today. Brands like Mello Yello and Sunkist Orange do also. Consumers are often unaware that other drinks contain as much or more caffeine than colas.

Dr. Michael Jacobson, director of the Center for Science in the Public Interest in Washington, D.C., says that he is concerned about soda-drinking children who may have difficulty handling caffeine.

"It's crazy to have a drug in a food that's so widely used by children," says Dr. Jacobson, whose group is lobbying for a ban on caffeine in soda pop.

Dr. Jacobson says caffeine in soft drinks also may affect adults, citing studies indicating negative effects of a large caffeine intake, particularly on pregnant women.

The FDA has proposed taking caffeine off its GRAS list (a list of additives "generally recognized as safe"), and putting it on an "interim" list for safety testing. The FDA also has proposed that caffeine no longer be required in cola and pepper drinks, as it is under current law.

The Virginia-based Federation of Homemakers, like Dr. Jacobson's group, wants the FDA to ban caffeine in soft drinks. But federation director Ruth Desmond says that close connections between the soft drink industry and the FDA make this effort difficult. She notes that the former head of the FDA's bureau of foods, Dr. Howard Roberts, now is a vice-president of the National Soft Drink Association.

Mrs. Desmond says that her group is concerned by reports that cola drinks have become the staple drink of many children, especially among the poor.

"Milk is gone, fruit drinks, none of them stand up to the caffeinated drinks," she says, adding that early consumption of large amounts of caffeine may give children a taste for later drug use.

Mrs. Desmond says that manufacturers do not need to use caffeine for drinks to have a cola taste.

Soft drink manufacturers generally argue that caffeine is a flavoring agent which enhances the taste of their products, and is not a chemical additive designed to artificially stimulate drinkers.

"Caffeine is a classic bittering agent and blends very well" with sugar in soda, says Jay Smith, spokesman for the National Soft Drink Association.

But caffeine's flavor effect is "extremely minor," according to Dr. Jacobson, who says it is used mainly for its stimulatory effects.

And not all manufacturers think caffeine is an essential flavor ingredient.

"We didn't think it (caffeine) was needed," says Edward Kiesel, a quality assessor for Safeway stores. Safeway markets a house brand of cola, Cragmont, which has no added caffeine. "We feel that it (caffeine) does not help our formulation."

Mr. Kiesel notes that Cragmont does contain a small amount of caffeine from its cola nut base, but says that the consumer would have to drink 350 cans of Cragmont Cola to receive the caffeine of one can of Coca-Cola.

Cragmont Cola is not a national best seller, but Mr. Kiesel says that Safeway stores sell more of the cola than of their other Cragmont brand drinks. He says that many inquiries about the cola come from Utah, the home region of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints (Mormons), a religious denomination that discourages caffeine use.

Royal Crown Cola introduced a diet, caffeine-free cola onto the market last year, called RC 100. Caroline Horstman, market research manager for RC 100, says the drink has been successful, with a 1 percent share of the soft drink market after its first year.

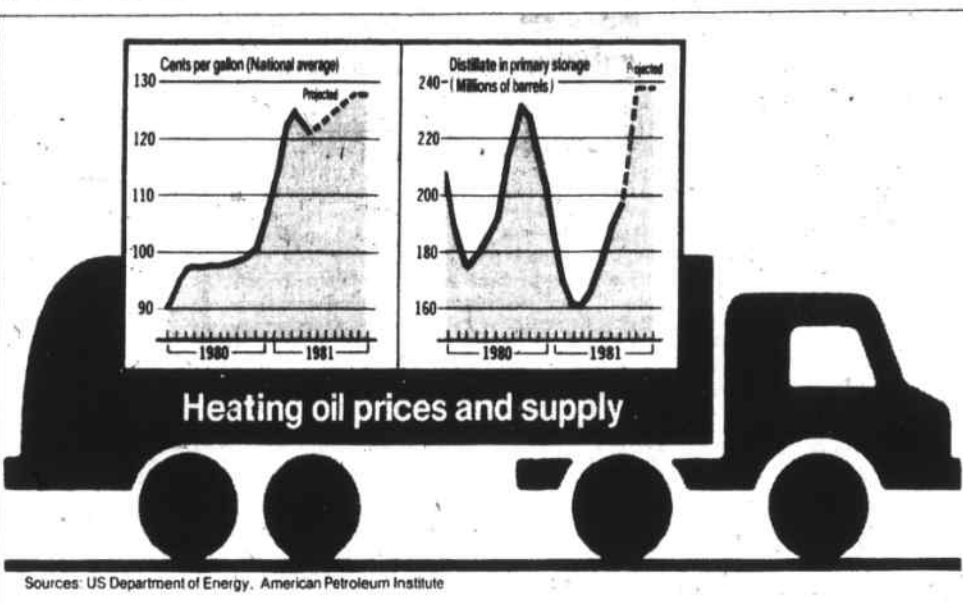

Miss Horstman also says that company tests showed a lack of caffeine would not harm the drink's flavor.

"We have found that in the taste-testing among consumers," Miss Horstman says, "...they can perceive no difference" between the taste of unlabeled caffeinated and decaffeinated diet colas.

Both Mr. Kiesel and Miss Horstman say their companies feel that there is a good market for caffeine-free soft drinks.

Miss Horstman says RC 100 appeals to consumers for health and religious reasons, or because they simply don't like caffeine.

Construct a new lawn this fall

Is your lawn in poor shape — overrun with weeds, eaten by insects or just not up to par? Well, why not construct a new lawn this fall. Our cool Massachusetts climate from mid-August to mid-September is ideal for starting lawns.

But before construction, you must consider the basics: soil, organic matter, lime fertilizer and grass mixtures. Subsoil is the basis for your lawn. This is the layer of soil which is directly underneath the topsoil or loam. This layer should be harrowed well or otherwise broken up, six inches deep. The grass roots need to penetrate deeply

FOREVER TWO

When now the time has come to part the nest
And leave those treasured dreams behind,
The fancy make-believe and all the rest
Of playtime joys that gently come to mind.
The time is now at hand to look beyond
The countless memories of yesteryear;
As you do strive to form a lasting bond
With one you find so very, very dear.

There is no magic wand that one can wave
To guarantee a life of wedded bliss.
So when the need of closeness you do crave
Give him a gentle hug and tender kiss
For as you say the simple words "I do",
What once was one is now forever two.

WALKING DOWN MAIN STREET (Observations)

Boy, did you see Mary Lou?
Looks like a "Hippo" at the zoo.
And how about that Bonnie Jean?
I remember when she was so lean.
Betty, she was such a shrimp.
Talk about a good year blimp.
But, Alice is so big and wide,
All those pounds she cannot hide.
Let's invite them to join T.O.P.S.
And they'll get along with less and less.
Someday in the future
When they step on the scale
They'll find that TOPS
Does not fail
For all those pounds will melt away
And they'll begin a bright new day.

THE RUNNER

He arises early at the crack of dawn,
His sneakers he quickly laces,
Out the door and into the air.
He heads for the river to warm up,
Now comes stretching, pushups, and situps,
Onto the bridge for more stretching,
This is the warmup procedure he follows
religiously,
He is now ready to begin.
The first mile is tough,
He huffs and puffs,
And recalls the voices of people who said he was crazy.

A deer suddenly hops across the trail,
A big smile comes across his face,
They are brothers in nature.
As the sun wears on he notices birds
chirping,
He feels much closer to them during these times,
He begins to feel like a bird in flight.

As he runs he reflects on his life,
How can he make it better?
A runner wants to reach his full potential.
He comes down the homestretch and he feels young and strong no matter what his age.

The world is his own and life is great
He feels like a superhero.

The run is over till another day,
He then heads to the shower ready to face another day and give it all he's got!

TO MY LOVE

When I was young I measured what I thought and felt
Against what I had heard and read,
And thought that love had passed me by
And left me you instead.
But now my hair is gray, though covered well to hide the fact,
While yours mostly blown away,
And that young sentiment I hoped was love
Grows lovelier every day.

TRUE LOVE

True Love is many things.
It is the involvement of the mind, the heart, and the soul, an understanding of mutual respect.
It is a yearning, a longing, a very fond desire.
It is the conquest of fear, a haven from loneliness, and a willingness to accept life and to be devoted to just one other person.
And, when it is really True Love, it is manifested and blessed with a touch of divinity.

ONE THROUGH TWELVE

I scan that clock upon the wall,
Recording with no sound at all.
His long, red finger sweeps the dial,
A face oblique, no frown, no smile.
Only partial secrets whispered here,
For he tells us when but never where.
Oh! But yes he does communicate,
He tells us if we're soon or late.
A brilliant feat for one so small,
That voiceless clock upon the wall.

RATIONALE

If it is true that love keeps one alert, alive, then I will go on living for I love my bed on a frosty night, the sight of my man well pleased, the magic and the mystery of long sought touches.

I love recapturing dreams, musing in old gardens, a kitchen and its shiny pots, fat scented candles glowing and the glistening fire that warms my hearth and heart.

I love the special ecstasy of leisure time I find to spend with a new book, a well-turned phrase and vintage wine, and one last look at the red sun sinking in the west as I plan my tomorrows.

One of the things I love best is the crystal quiet of a new day, when the world still sleeps and I, alone, see the first snow of winter pure and unsullied, lying in frothy mounds around black ebony trees while a deer braves the brink of dawn.

And when at Christmas the children laugh and laugh while they toast the chestnuts in the fire, and the house is filled with delectable smells, and the village below is aglow and loud with carols and bells, I love the secrets that make eyes shine.

I love the tan of my man's face, the green of trees that lace the summer skies, all yellow breasted birds, anemones and golden bees, my fat smooth cats and my lumbering dogs and my backyard a haven for mourning doves...oh these are but a few of my loves.

Check for high blood pressure

Hypertension, or high blood pressure, is a silent killer. Although someone may look and feel fine, he may have hypertension.

Hypertension is not prevalent in any sex or age group, but is most commonly found in middle age people. Most high blood pressure cannot be cured, but it can be controlled by modifying lifestyles and/or by taking daily medication.

What exactly is this disease which affects 23 million adults in America? Blood pressure readings measure the force of the heartbeat as the blood is pushed from the heart into the blood vessels (top number or systolic); and the pressure of the blood against the vessel walls when the heart is relaxed between beats (bottom or diastolic).

So-called "normal" blood pressure readings range from 90-60 to 139-89 depending on one's age and health history.

To learn more about hypertension and to obtain blood pressure readings, the Regional Health Center in Wilmington is holding a Hypertension Screening Clinic on Thursday, September 10 from 4-8 p.m. This will enable those who work to find out what their reading is at the end of the work to find out what their reading is at the end of the work day. Screenings are now being held quarterly at the Regional Health Center in September, December, March and June.

Registered nurses will conduct the screening program, including individual teaching and referrals for those with high blood pressure. Free brochures will be available on high blood pressure and women and high blood pressure. Heights and weights will also be taken and patient history cards will be filled out and may be used in future hypertension clinics.

Medicare, Medex & Medicaid reviewed

"Medicare, Medex and Medicaid: The System Made Simple" will again be presented at the Regional Health Center in Wilmington due to a number of requests for this vital information in a time when changes are being made in the system.

The program will be held on Monday, September 14 from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at the Regional Health Center, Donna E. Levine, M.S.W., Director of Social Services for Choate-Symmes Health Services, Inc. will conduct the program.

She will provide a basic overview of what Medicare is, what it pays for and how it is used. Participants will have an opportunity to discuss case examples to maximize their understanding of their coverage.

Medicaid and the Medex programs will be explored in the context of how they complement Medicare coverage. Eligibility for Medicaid will be explained. Coverage available through Medex and the availability of an open period will also be addressed.

Hypertension is not more common among those who are anxious or tense as many people believe, but there are some risk factors including heredity, obesity, smoking and excessive sodium and fat intake. Those who wish to attend should call the Community Health Education office at 657-3910, ext. 567. Appointments are not necessary.

Learn more about blood pressure and what it means by attending the Hypertension Screening Clinic at the Regional Health Center in Wilmington on Route 62 East. You may be healthier for it!

Come on, give it a try! If you want further information, telephone 729-0570 or 861-8106.

FOSTER FAMILIES NEEDED

A successful program for children and teenagers needs the help of local residents. The Alternative Homes Program of Mystic Valley Mental Health Center currently has more youngsters in need of brief foster care than can be placed.

"Local families often provide the perfect solution for a youth who is experiencing family crisis," says Barbara Jopling, staff social worker. Acceptance of a youth into a foster family is made for periods from approximately 1-4 months. Foster families receive payment for room and board as well as support from Alternative Homes Program staff. Many families find this work very rewarding.

Single persons or families interested in becoming foster parents should call Alternative Homes staff at 861-0890.

strike was over, and the house was certainly doing a crack business. On our way into the park, which is directly across the street from the Cask & Flagon, we saw more signs of thankfulness that the strike was settled: vendors of all kinds doing non-stop selling of everything from peanuts to hotdogs to baseball souvenirs. Inside, the concession stands were also brisk as ever. There was even the addition of cheese nachos stands (but at $1.50 per serving, we passed). We noticed price increases on most everything (concession owners probably trying to recoup some of their losses incurred during the strike), but that didn't seem to be slowing down business, particularly at the beer counters.

Our box seats, which were situated four rows behind the visiting team's batter's warm-up circle, gave us perfect view of the field and the rest of the park, which on this night had greens and reds so rich in velvety tones they resembled one of those lush museum masterpieces that looks like it's about to leap out at you.

The game (with the California Angels, which took the field with Fred Lynn, Rick Burleson and Butch Hobson, all of whom played with the Red Sox just a year ago) was marked by two significant events: the first was the ear-splitting hit on the forehead of his batting helmet that third baseman Carney Lansford (who played with the Angels just last season) took midway through the game (he walked off the field on his own accord and later we learned that he was going to be O.K.); the second event was second baseman Jerry Remy's memorable verbal duel with the home plate umpire, during which the affable ball player removed his batting gloves and tossed them in the air with the most impromptu melodramatic choreography we've seen since Gypsy Rose Lee. Both events will surely provide Boston sportscasters with recorded vignettes that can be replayed throughout the winter whenever the urge to recall the boys of summer strikes them. When we left the game during the seventh inning stretch the Red Sox were ahead 3-1 (they went on to win the game).

On our way home we noticed that most of the trucks and vans that had disrupted traffic on Beacon Street were gone; the Back Bay street had returned to normal. Then on the highway we observed that the gentle mist had left a glossy wet coat over the city's skyline, restoring most of its familiar brilliance on this cool, damp early fall-like evening.

Parents must get more active

The National PTA Board of Directors today called for parents and other community leaders to assume a major role in determining educational priorities and in influencing financial decisions that will be required by the dramatic changes in federal funding of education.

The Educational Improvement and Consolidation Act of 1981, signed into law last week, lumped federal education programs into block grants and shifted educational decision-making from the federal to state and local levels. At the same time, Congress reduced funds for education by 25 percent.

According to the PTA Board, meeting in Chicago, this shift is both a potential opportunity to return control of education to local communities and states, and a possible threat to children whose needs may no longer be served. The PTA Board expressed concern that, faced with these changes, state and local communities will have to choose between cutting educational programs and services or increasing state and local funding for these programs.

The Act also calls for "systematic consultation with parents of children attending elementary and secondary schools" in each district, but does not specifically spell out what form "consultation" will take.

Said Mary Ann Leveridge, National PTA president, "It is ironic that this act, which is intended to return educational decision-making by eliminating the previous requirements for community and parental advice. The only way to prevent diminishing the parental role," said Leveridge, "is for parents to insist on legitimate participation and involvement in decision-making for educational planning, programs and funding."

"The best way for parents to assure that their wishes are known is for them to make this a matter of prime concern in their local PTA unit," said Leveridge.

"PTA unit members should educate themselves and their community about the change in government focus, suggest consultation procedures to be used in their local school district, request participation in all consultation and monitor school district action so that it complies with the needs of children as well as the intent of the law."

The National PTA — a six million member volunteer organization of parents, educators, students and others — is the largest child advocacy group in the world.

into the soil and a compacted layer will prevent this. Subsoil must also provide good drainage.

Good quality topsoil in sufficient amount will assure rapid lawn establishment. A fine sandy loam soil, 4 to 6 inches thick is ideal. It should have a good capacity to hold plant nutrients and water and permit movement of air to plant roots.

Organic matter should be added during the construction process. Peat moss or compost are good sources of organic matter and should be spread 1 to 2 inches deep and mixed well with the soil. Limestone is necessary on most soils for best lawn growth. The quantity of lime depends on the soil acidity. However, one hundred pounds of ground lime per 1000 square feet is usually adequate for seedbed construction. If a soil test is made, follow recommended lime requirements.

Fertilizer is the source of nutrients for your grass. There are many types of lawn fertilizers; some organic such as sewage and some chemical as 5-10-5 or 10-10-10. Either may be used satisfactorily.

Grasses for use in Massachusetts must be adaptable to this area. Permanent grasses which are recommended include Kentucky Bluegrass varieties, fescues such as chewings or creeping red and ryegrass. The above three species should be used in mixtures rather than singly for best results.

With these basic considerations combined with adequate water and care including insect disease and weed treatment, construction can be a rewarding project. For homeowners constructing a lawn this fall, the Middlesex County Extension Service offers a free publication entitled "Lawn Construction." Just write to 105 Everett Street, Concord, Ma. 01742 for your copy.

Retired Men's Club "casts off"

On Wednesday, August 26, the Retired Men's Club, 207 strong, were entertained by viewing a film on "Sailing...Do it Right...Keep it Safe". It was produced for the makers of a beverage known in some quarters as "Michelob". In one scene, when the sails were full, the sheets and halyards secured and winches locked, the captain and crew could be observed quaffing a 'tall cool one'.

This must have reminded several viewers of days gone by when they were leaving a wake astern on a fast run from Marblehead Neck to Point Allerton, Hull. In a club of this size, there must be one or more who, in their youth, 'went down to the sea in ships'. For the rest, it was a colorful, but short course in terms, trim and technique required to safely enjoy this popular pastime. Stressing the safety factor, it was noted that at no time did the craft pictured, sail beyond sight of land. Films of this quality that are instructive as well as entertaining, are always welcomed by the members ship.

This being the final meeting of his term of office, Pres. George Flewelling was in rare form. After the customary Flag Salute, he drew attention to the Minuteman motif on his tie and the word Eastern (airline) on his hat, by remarking that "I might take off any minute for parts unknown". He also passed out EAL wings to all members of the Executive Board.

The following (all Past-Presidents) were introduced and were accorded a round of applause: Charles Hayward; Jennings Heath; Henry Murphy; Paul Richmond; Ervin "Gus" Seavey; Ray Smart and Robert W. Sproul.

Charter-member Albert S. Bull and P. Pres. Jennings Heath were given a special introduction and they responded with appropriate remarks. Mr. Heath averred that joining the club was the best thing he's done since retiring.

Gus Seavey conducted the door-prize drawing, won by the writer, Al Webber. A decorative coal shovel, the product of (now) Past President Flewelling's profitable hobby. This shovel is like thousands he has supplied to Gift Shops in New England and beyond. This hobby is a natural for George who was, (for most of his working life) a premier salesman of stoves of every description, throughout the eastern U.S.

Bandmaster Chester Card, Everett, was pleased to announce that he has turned over his baton to Joseph Leary, sometime, concert-master of the Reading Symphony Orchestra.

At the conclusion of his Sick and Visitation report, Joe Whiting asked for a moment of silence for the Walter Cleary and Arthur W. Anderson. Paul Richmond read the following 'Thought For Today' from the pen of Arthur Anderson:

"You never have to walk alone
However dark the night,
Within each precious child of God
There burns a lasting light.
You never have to bear alone
Despair, or pain, or sorrow,
Through smiles and tears
God lights the years
And guides us toward tomorrow."

Before Roger Callahan, Revere, played three old favorite numbers on his chromatic harmonica, he gave the Club an unsolicited thank you for accepting members from beyond the borders of Wakefield. Present membership represents more than a score of towns and cities.

Henry Murphy of "Reddin" taped several members' greetings to Secretary Mal Choate who, (as Bob Sproul reported) is making slow but steady progress at the Lahey Clinic, Burlington.

With the announcement of a trip to Deerfield Fair, Oct. 2nd, Bob Sproul mentioned the several 'new faces' he observed on the recent picnic to Georges Island. This, he said, "Augers well for the lifeblood of the Club".

Ralph Wentzel announced that the Camera Club will resume regular meetings on Tuesday, September 15.

Dick Taylor, Program Chairman, extended thanks to all who had assisted in anyway, in providing interesting programs (24 in all) during his year in office. He will be installed as President (together with his executive suite) by Dr. John Prescott Robertson, at the next meeting on September 9, to which all members and their retired friends are cordially invited.

Accidents

perature of your hot water isn't scalding.

Have restraining gates on stairs.
Make sure stairs and porches are structurally sound.

Use smoke detectors.
Have fire drills.
Have your house wiring inspected.

Keep medicines locked.
Keep emergency numbers posted at the telephone.
By the time children are five they should be able to give their name, address, and dial the fire, police, and state poison control numbers.

Each year 15,000 — 25,000 persons under 15 years old die accidentally and 19 million (three out of every ten children) will be taken to a doctor because of some sort of injury. Last year 86 Andover children were hospitalized due to accidents as were 219 Lawrence children and 122 Methuen children, O'Reilly said state statistics show.

Forty percent of childhood accidents occur in the home — 70 percent of all preschoolers accidents occur there, O'Reilly said. Each year one million accidents take place on playgrounds, including supervised playgrounds, O'Reilly went on. These are mostly simple cuts, scraps, broken bones or bone dislocations — but still accidents.

He surprised many present by reporting that each year 100,000 children are injured severely enough to see a doctor in falls and other accidents with tricycles.

National statistics say half of all children under age one (1,750,000 children each year) are taken for medical examination because of falls. He finds this number somewhat high in his experience, but he knows the scenario well. The infant is under three months old, and, therefore, is believed to be too young to roll over. The child is on the dresser or changing table, the phone rings and the child is left alone for just a minute. Suddenly the baby screams and is found on the floor.

No matter what the age of the child, he must be kept awake at least one hour after a head injury, O'Reilly said. The size of the lump on the head is not an indication of the extent of the injury.

He urged the use of car seats and seat belts for children. "An adult can walk away from an accident which will kill a child," he pointed out.

Keep children out of the area when the lawnmower is in use, O'Reilly urged. The force of an object such as a small stone being hurled by a rotary blade is equal to a 50 pound concrete block falling 20 feet. O'Reilly has always told his children to use a stick rather than a hand to free a blade in a lawnmower or snowblower because frequently there is "one more rotation" in the blade which is all that is needed to amputate a finger.

There are 250,000 substances on the market capable of causing poisoning — many of which we don't think of as being poisonous, O'Reilly said. For example, vanilla is 35 percent alcohol by volume which makes it a poison if used improperly. Such things as insecticides list ingredients, but many products don't. Call the state's poison control center immediately in a suspected poisoning and rush the child to an emergency room, he said.

Looking for a good job

"What is a good job?" It is a job that pays off both today and tomorrow — in personal development as well as in money.

It's a job that offers variety, the spice that makes working so interesting, a job that lets you work with interesting people.

Machine Shorthand makes such jobs possible. It is a skill that lets you be the highly productive employee who is always in demand — because it lets you work smarter, not harder.

Your keyboard shorthand skills will pay off in the future as well, putting you in touch with tomorrow's word-processing technology — for tomorrow's careers.

With this simple keyboard, you can write anything! It is a phonetic system — you take down the way words sound, using plain English letters printed on a paper tape. Using both hands, you press down any number of keys at once to write a whole word or phrase at a single effortless stroke. You use different letter combinations to make different sounds.

You will make the most of your potential in career areas such as there: Administrative-Executive Secretary; Medical-Scientific Secretary; Legal Secretary; Conference and Court Reporter.

Because Machine Shorthand is an alphabetic and numeric keyboard system, it is capable of direct input to the computer.

Marian Court Junior College of Business is happy to announce their new "Continued Education Program," "Earn A Degree While You Earn A Living."

Classes begin September 14, Monday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings from 6:30 — 9:30. A two-year degree program. Yes, in just two years by taking only two courses at a time you will receive an Associates Degree. For information call 595-6768, Janet Cicolini, Coordinator of Continuing Education.

Avoid a used car lemon

Buying a used car doesn't have to mean buying some one else's troubles. Becoming an informed used car shopper will take time and work. But, the effort can save you a lot of time and money in the future. Whether you buy a new or used car, they are one of the biggest expenses in your life. According to Connie Bettis, Home Economist from the Middlesex County Extension Service there are tips you can follow that will help you avoid getting stuck with a lemon.

Investigate! Before you look at any cars read the Consumer Reports Annual Buying Guide Issue and their April Auto Issue. These books can be obtained at your local library or book store. The Buying Guide illustrates how you can check the cars condition by doing on-the-lot and on-the-road tests. Leave, if the salesman will not let you test-drive the car. The Buying Guide goes into detail identifying tests that will assist you in checking the car's condition, e.g., engine pick-up, transmission, brakes and if it has been in an accident. The on-the-lot and on-the-road testing will probably take an hour to complete. You should do it during the day and with someone knowledgeable. If the car passes your test have your mechanic check it out thoroughly.

Consumer Protection. In Massachusetts there is no such thing as an "as is" sale. The dealer cannot sell any car "with all faults" or with a "50-50 warranty." All goods sold in Massachusetts come with an Implied Warranty of Merchantability. This law ensures that goods are usable for their intended purpose. If you have problems with a dealer trying to void this warranty contact your local consumer protection agency or the Attorney General, at 727-8400.

Conversation at family meals plays valuable role

Dining together includes care-giving and instruction in manners and conduct

By Marilyn Hoffman

"Eating in" is still a family tradition, despite the inroads of fast-food emporiums and work and play schedules of family members. And table talk between family members, despite the distractions of television and busy lives, is more important today than ever before.

These could be two of the conclusions of a study, titled "Some American Families at Dinner," of 33 typical middle- and upper-middle-class families in Princeton, N.J.

In analyzing the findings of the videotaped observations of the New Jersey families at mealtime, Dr. Michael Lewis, researcher and director of Prin-cton University Educational Testing Service, found that most of the families (consisting of a father, mother, and from one to four children) did not always eat together, but did dine at dinner with all members present at least twice a week.

Each of the families had a three-year-old child who was especially observed by the researchers. This study of social behavior at the table attempted some measure of the inter-relationships of such functions of family dining as eating, nurturing (expressing warmth and love), care-giving, and instruction in manners and conduct.

Dr. Lewis says the research provided of the following conclusions:

- One of the most important functions of the dinner meal for families is maintaining the family system through the exchange of information between members. This ongoing, everyday conversation helps maintain continuity in all family relationships.

Much of the talk at the table, he says, is directed to informing the father about what has happened during the day. The mother informs him directly, and then questions the children so they will talk to the father directly. Later the father inquires, on his own, as to specific activities of the children, what they have been doing, and where they are going.

- Mothers talk more to fathers than fathers to mothers at the dinner table.

- Mothers engage children in conversation more than their fathers do. And children speak to their mothers more than to their fathers. In general, the parents (mother in particular) are the focus of verbal interaction at the table. Young children do the least amount of talking to each other.

- Middle children tend to be spoken to much less frequently than the oldest and youngest children, and also to do less speaking. Parents should be alerted to this situation and try to remedy it.

- Fathers interact considerably more with their sons than with their daughters and tend to increase their attention toward their older rather than their younger children. Mothers do not usually make such distinctions.

- Where there is a single child, both parents tend to direct almost all attention and time to the child, leaving little conversation for each other. Parents again begin to converse with each other after other children arrive on the scene and particularly after children get older and can occupy each other.

- As family size increases, each person is able to speak less, and families don't tend to stay around the table for longer periods so everyone can have a say. Also, the larger the family, the greater the likelihood of stress and even chaos.

- While fathers often do not concern themselves with dinner chores in a small family, once the size of the family gets past five, it takes both adults to manage the tasks - serve the meal, feed the children, teach and train, give care and nurture.

Dr. Lewis remarks that, as the father of two children himself, the study had shown him how a family sitting down to dinner together has less to do with feeding and more to do with social contacts. Conversation and camaraderie are more important, he thinks, than constant nagging reminders about manners and what foods are eaten or ignored.

This is not to imply that manners should not be taught, he says, but children learn faster and more than their actions might indicate. While still very young, they simply resort to doing the easy or expedient thing. "My own 13-year-old son," he says, "still doesn't have the best of manners at home, but when he goes out he is better perfect. So I know he knows and he knows he knows."

The same son once scolded his father for "telling me what to do every minute." His father, the child expert, had to stand back and try to hear himself as his son heard him. Then he decided the boy was right. He was trying to exert too much control and constant direction. And he stopped.

"If most parents could hear themselves played back on tapes, they would become far more sensitive to their children's needs and points of views, and stop hammering away," he says with a laugh.

"I think that normal children who have been reasonably well trained and who are presented with an interesting assortment of foods will behave themselves passably and eat sufficiently of the foods of their own choice. I don't have to concern myself too much with the messes small tots might make, but can teach them how to clean up those messes."

"My personal theory is to treat children like people and to apply the same proper interpersonal rules to my approach to them as to adults - neither neglecting them nor over-concerning myself with them. I believe that children learn as much from observing adults and then imitating and modeling our behavior, as they do from actual instruction. This means that parents must constantly demonstrate by their own actions and behavior what they are telling their children to do. The child gets two confusing messages when a parent tells him which is the right fork to use, and then proceeds to use the wrong one. So does the child who listens to parents bicker and fuss, yet is told to be nice to his brothers and sisters."

He believes the same principle applies to conversation. Children who listen to adults talking amiably, discussing events, and debating issues in a vital and lively way, become better and more fluent talkers themselves. They learn by emulation. It is good, he says, for parents to try to involve children in such general discussion, and to give simple explanations to youngsters about subjects they may not understand. But the child who simply listens gets a sense of the flow and exchange of ideas.

Finally, studies have shown how often the television set has been moved into the dining area and become another "voice" at the dinner table. When TV comes in, he says, "everything else decreases - the amount of care-giving and nurturance, and the amount of control and teaching. And as far as family conversation is concerned, everyone, but everyone, is shortchanged.

Tips Furniture care

A weekly cleaning will help keep upholstered furniture looking new, reminds Mary Mulvey Williams of the Middlesex Cooperative Extension Service. The home economist suggests a few routines:

Vacuum the cushions once a week. Just as the wood furniture gathers dust, so do rugs and upholstered furniture. Although the dust is usually well camouflaged on an upholstered chair, it's there. If you don't remove it, the dust will work into the fabric and eventually stain or eat away the fabric.

Place upholstered furniture out of the direct rays of the sun because sunlight fades and breaks down many upholstery fabrics. Despite weekly care, furniture occasionally will need additional cleaning. To be safe, test a stain removal technique on a scrap piece of fabric or on a part of the upholstery that doesn't show.

Ordinary soil may be removed with a sponge lightly dampened with water and a small amount of detergent.

To remove a spot or clean areas that have absorbed body oils, use a dry cleaning fluid and follow the manufacturer's instructions. Work without soaking or harsh rubbing. If you choose a foam cleaner to remove stubborn soil, be sure to sponge off all traces of the cleaner. Otherwise, it will dry on the fabric and deteriorate the finish. The soapuds method of removing embedded soil involves making soap jelly. Combine one part mild soap flakes or shaved soap with five parts boiling water, and allow to cool to a jelly (about one hour in a cool place). The soap used should be safe for silks.

Beat a small amount of the Jelly to the consistency of stiffly beaten egg white. Scrub fabric with the stiff lather. Working toward the center, clean a small area at a time. Use a sponge instead of a brush to prevent breaking threads, and scrub gently with the weave. Remove soiled suds with the dull edge of a knife. Wipe twice with a soft cloth wrung dry in clear water. Soap left in a fabric leaves a fatty substance that attracts soil and moths.

Pentagon will get more continuity in buying arms

By Peter Grier

Congress appears ready to permit a significant change in the Pentagon's shopping habits. The move could save millions through efficient purchasing, but critics worry it will make defense industries less competitive - raising the cost of weapons in the long run.

Both House and Senate versions of the 1982 defense appropriations bill allow greater use of multiyear contracting, whereby the Defense Department promises a supplier it will keep buying certain weapons over a period of years.

By encouraging efficient production schedules and the stockpiling of raw materials, proponents say, the technique will help the Pentagon stretch its budget further. Military sources estimate that multiyear contracting could save $15 billion over the next five years.

Multiyear was hailed as "an idea whose time has come" in a recent report from the General Accounting Office.

But critics are jittery about the technique's possible effects on the federal budget and the defense industry.

"It's probably worth a try," says a congressional aide who works on the subject, "but I'm a little leery about giving the Defense Department such broad authority."

It isn't a shiny new idea. Multiyear contracting was first authorized in 1963, and the Pentagon used it as a regular purchasing technique throughout the 1960s - until Litton Industries ran up truly spectacular cost overruns on a helicopter carrier contract.

Congress, horrified, banned contracts with cancellation clauses of more than $1 million, unless specifically authorized. In effect, this banned multiyear contracting, which locks the Pentagon into future purchases through multimillion-dollar cancellation provisions. In 1975, the ceiling was raised to $5 million.

But multiyear contracting is chic once again. The House Armed Services Committee held a now-legendary series of hearings in December which emphasized the sorry state of America's industrial base for defense. Witness after witness promoted multiyear contracting.

"It was pounded home by everyone," says an aide who attended the hearings.

As a result, this year's House defense appropriations bill explicitly allows up to five-year contracts for weapon systems meeting criteria for stability and use. It also endorses multiyear contracting for parts and materials.

More to the point, the bill would raise the cancellation ceiling to $100 million. Anything larger would have to be specifically approved by Congress.

The Senate defense spending bill also praises multiyear procurement, but would raise the cancellation ceiling to only $50 million. A conference committee is expected to iron out differences and produce a final bill after the August recess.

The top 10 defense contractors in fiscal 1980

2. McDonnell Douglas	$3.2 billion	Jet fighters, cargo aircraft, missiles
3. United Technologies	$3.1 billion	Jet aircraft engines, helicopters

So some form of endorsement for this shopping technique appears certain to become law. Critics, however, say it could force the US government to waste money on unneeded merchandise.

"Multiyear contracting fences in money, commits future Congresses to particular major weapon systems acquisitions, and reduces congressional oversight," a report from the House Committee on Government Operations claims. "If used to excess, it would significantly reduce the flexibility of DOD (Department of Defense) to respond to unforeseen changes in mission needs."

Since the cancellation ceiling would lay a heavy penalty on the government for changing its mind, some claim the move would encourage the Pentagon to throw good tax dollars after bad.

"They may go ahead with some marginal or bad projects just to keep their cancellation money," says a congressional staff member who opposes the contracts.

Proponents repeat that items eligible for multiyear buying must be of known reliable design and in constant use - in effect, the bread, butter, and milk of Pentagon purchases.

Ammunition, for instance, The Air Force estimates that multiyear contracting saved about 9 percent on a relatively small purchase of 30-mm shells. But since two companies were each awarded part of the contract, competition saved the taxpayer even more, according to the Project on Military Procurement.

The distinction emphasizes critics' most serious charge - that multiyear procurement would shut out many contractors, forcing them from the defense industry and ultimately raising prices through lack of competition. The Pentagon would then find itself unable to comparison-shop.

"If one manufacturer has production tied up for five years, who is going to stay in the business?" asks a congressional opponent.

Economic lethargy will last a while longer

By Babson's Reports Inc.
Wellesley Hills, Mass.

Recently the government released its initial estimate of real gross national product (GNP stripped of inflation) for the second quarter of 1981 which disclosed a decline of nearly 2 percent. Even before this latest reading of the widely monitored gauge of the nation's economic health was made public, spokesman for the government had already indicated the probability of generally lackluster business over the balance of the current year. Their present anticipation is that any substantial upturn in economic activity will be postponed until after the turn of the year, a scenario that is admittedly somewhat less promising than earlier predictions implied.

BABSON'S VIEW OF SECOND-HALF 1981

Just before midyear the staff of Babson's Reports issued its own forecast of economic conditions for the final two quarters of this year. This view does not differ materially from the expectations of government economists, but it is our contention that elements of a business upturn may yet begin to take shape before 1981 is out. Looking for some help from tax relief for individuals and business at the federal level, even though this assistance may be more psychological than substantive at that point, the Babson staff is hopeful that the economy will enjoy a sufficient degree of firming to enable real GNP to edge upward in the fourth 1981 quarter. Our expectation for the current quarter, however, is that it will be generally flat.

ANOTHER ECONOMIC RECESSION?

One generally accepted formula is that a period of economic recession occurs when the nation's real gross national product (GNP in 1972 dollars) suffers two consecutive quarters of decline. Thus, the government's estimate of a 1.9 percent drop in the second 1981 quarter's real GNP means that the American economy could possibly be in the throes of another recession. In fact, unless the figure for the past quarter is revised upward substantially, a further drop in this barometer during the summer would fulfill the qualifications of a recession. As of now, the situation is rated a toss-up.

NO TIME TO PUSH THE PANIC BUTTON

Mention of the term recession understandably stirs widespread consternation. So, the probability that the economy may be undergoing a recession, at least in a technical sense, is an unsettling influence. But we do feel that this is no time to panic. Bear in mind that for the first three months of 1981 business had racked up a superlative performance, with real GNP surging ahead a hefty 8 percent in the face of a generally anticipated smaller increment. Thus, the distinct setback in the course of the second quarter is not out of order. Further, the slippage took place from an unprecedented height of economic activity, so the nation is still possessed of considerable underlying strength despite the obvious transition from a resolute upthrust to a sidewise course. Nevertheless, a deep, debilitating slump does not seem to be in the cards.

PERSISTENT HIGH INTEREST RATES

There is no question but that the economy has been damaged by the protracted spell of tight credit and unduly high interest rates. The Fed's policy of monetary restraint has been long sustained in order to squeeze down inflationary pressures. While important sectors of the economy have been hurt badly by credit restraint, inflation has been difficult to subdue. Even though prices have come back down in recent months, the expansion in money supply has stubbornly resisted the policy of credit restraint.

The monetary authorities are determined to keep a tight rein on credit for an indeterminate period. Nevertheless, slackening of the economy's vitality is likely soon to send short-term money rates to lower levels, though long-term rates will be less responsive.

Watch for the bull !

When national economic barometers registered a chilly second quarter on Wall Street, Massachusetts continued hot and inviting to its growing investing public.

A recent New York Stock Exchange survey ranked Massachusetts third among all states in investor purchase of mutual fund shares, outranked only by New York and California. As of 1980, Massachusetts purchases totaled more than 887 million dollars. New York totaled 1.2 billion, and California 1 billion. Far behind Massachusetts in fourth place was Pennsylvania with 626 million dollars.

The same survey ranked Massachusetts tenth with respect to the number of individual owners of shares of public corporations. Approximately 922,000 of Massachusetts 5.7 million citizens held stock in 1980, a near 10 percent increase in ownership in a five year

Local Arts Councils contemplate their future

by the State Arts Council

In Springfield, free Sunday evening performances fill Forest Park with music and theatre. On the Cape — in Provincetown, Truro and Wellfleet, plans are underway for the annual Fall Festival on September 17-20, when more than 75 professional artists and craft-people will open their studios to the public.

In Lowell last year, a series of art lessons offered to senior citizens proved so popular that the class filled in one day. To the west, elementary school children in the 26 towns of Franklin County have been treated to an exciting range of experience in music, theatre, dance and the like since the mid-seventies.

All of these activities are sponsored by local arts councils, organizations devoted to creating lively cultural atmospheres in their communities. With Proposition 2½ cutting municipal funds and the loss of several federally funded programs like CETA, these small and energetic councils face a most demanding challenge — to do more with less.

To assist such groups, the Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities is sponsoring a two-day working conference at Old Sturbridge Village on September 24 and 25 for arts managers from around the state. Arts leaders will make presentations and lead discussions to generate new ideas on the running of programs and the sharing of resources and to explore the use of local advocacy as well as the potentially influential cable television.

"This is an era of declining public support for the arts, and community arts groups, because they are so new, will have a harder time surviving than the older institutions which have cultivated the traditional sources of support over the years," says Anne Hawley, executive director of the Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities. "Local arts councils do enjoy wide support from people, but they have not had time yet to secure funding from private sources. We are sponsoring this statewide conference to help 200 local arts representatives become more familiar with the types of support still available to them, as well as to explore the development of new sources of revenue."

"These local organizations," Hawley continues, "do so much to provide access for all citizens in the state to the arts and humanities by offering free or low-cost performances and workshops to people of all ages, by serving as a clearinghouse for information on local activities, and often by awarding funds to those groups that residents agree should be helped. Beyond that, they manage to employ literally hundreds of artists and humanists — from the musicians who play at concerts to talks by local historians."

"We do face hard times," agrees Mary Kay Hoffman, director of the Arts Council of Franklin County, founded by a group of parents determined to improve the arts program in the schools. "With the enrichment funds cut throughout the system, we will be unable to continue to provide the types of services we have in the past. But change is not necessarily a bad word. We will simply do something different. Our current plan is to offer an in-depth visual arts program in our own facility."

One of the ways to develop community support, reports Bob Teigs of the Lower Cape Arts and Humanities Council, is to find new sponsors for specific programs. "We started an 'Art in the Bank' program here some time ago. We set up the system for selecting artwork, and the banks provided exhibition space. Now two of the banks have taken over the selection of artwork. We are no longer involved, but the art is still available to the public. I think that's great. We got the idea rolling, and now it has a life of its own."

No two arts councils are the same. The Lowell Arts Council, formed as an integral part of that city's government, has used the short year and a half of its existence to help fund a summer theatre, a foreign film festival, a design contest to find a product that could be manufactured by the handicapped, and then reached out to local businesses to secure wider support for the future.

An equally wide range of activities has been sponsored by the Mayor's Office of Community and Cultural Affairs (MOCCA) in Springfield — from the painting of murals to the publication of a book of poems by prison inmates. A four-day Festival, held over the 4th of July weekend, has become an annual tradition according to Deputy Commissioner Rick Norcross, who reports an attendance of more than 100,000 people who can choose from more than 75 performances. All for free.

"Local arts councils became a national phenomenon when people, no matter where they lived — in city neighborhoods, small towns, or suburbs, wanted arts events and programs available nearby," notes Anne Hawley. "These councils now provide an enormous service to the citizens of the Commonwealth. Our late September conference will assist these groups in meeting the many challenges of the next decade."

Those interested in additional information on the conference, "Planning for the Eighties", should contact: Susan Hartnett, Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities, One Ashburton Place, Boston, Ma. 02108 or call (617) 727-3668.

Local arts councils benefit residents and artists like Carole Bolger (above), whose studio will be open to the public during the Fall Festival weekend planned by the Lower Cape Arts and Humanities Council for September 17-20. A special conference to help such groups meet the challenge of the 1980s is planned for late September. For full information, call Susan Hartnett at the State Arts Council, (617) 727-3668.

Science Museum seeks volunteers

Do you want to give someone a real "eye-opener"? Ready to share a great "discovery"? Or, just willing to lead the way? If so, then the Museum of Science wants you for its Volunteer Program.

The Museum offers men and women volunteers an on-going educational opportunity in exchange for a half-day-per-week commitment, either weekdays or weekends. These give-and-take assignments put the volunteer in touch with staff, visitors of all ages, and other volunteers of similar interests.

A variety of positions are available. The Visitor Guide program needs volunteers with a background in science to explain exhibits to youngsters. Project Eye-opener, depends on volunteers to introduce second graders from the inner-city to a museum experience.

The Arthur D. Little Discovery Room relies on volunteers to orient young children amid a wealth of exploratory materials in nature and physical science. There are assignments to be found in the bustle of the Museum shop, and volunteers with clerical and technical skills are also in demand.

"You don't need to be a science teacher to work as a volunteer," said Janice Wisoff, a Discovery Room volunteer, recently.

"An interest in science is useful, but not necessary," Wisoff calls her work in the Discovery Room very rewarding, adding "Sometimes a child's enthusiasm will touch you in just the right way...that's why I became a volunteer here."

Volunteering is also a good way for a mother with young children to expand her horizons. For volunteers with small children, the Museum runs a cooperative nursery.

"The cooperative nursery is one of the reasons why I can continue with my volunteer work," said Sharon Jarvie, Malden, an Eye-opener volunteer. The mother of two youngsters, ages 3½ and 5, she feels that "They (the kids) learn a lot in the nursery. They learn to share and to play with other kids, and also how to handle being with another adult."

Training sessions for the programs are: Eye-opener, Oct. 6; Discovery Room, Oct. 17-18; and Visitor Guides, Oct. 31-Nov. 1. To arrange for an interview, call the Volunteer Office at 723-2500, ext. 259.

"Arthur" - movie tale of redemption

By DAN KENNEDY

The ads for the movie "Arthur" bill it as an uproarious, slapstick comedy along the lines of "Stripes" or "National Lampoon's Animal House."

You wouldn't expect that it would turn out to be a rather standard Hollywood yarn about redemption through love. Yet, once you get through the first half hour — which is something like the Three Stooges meeting the Marx Brothers — that's exactly what it is.

While Arthur Bach, the lead character, is redeemed by love, the movie "Arthur" (rate PG) is redeemed by its excellent cast, headed by half-pint comedian-actor Dudley Moore.

Moore is simply an excellent comic actor, and in "Arthur" he shows signs that he may be ready to move a bit beyond that narrow category. Because in "Arthur," Moore is an actor first, a comedian second.

Arthur is, above all else, a sad character — at least during the first half of the movie. And Moore does an excellent job of portraying the contradictory aspects of Arthur Bach's character.

Arthur is the embodiment of what Smokey Robinson and the Miracles sang about many years ago in "The Tears of a Clown" — laughing on the outside, crying on the inside.

The son of a family of business giants, he's worth $750 million. Because he has always been dominated by his overbearing elders, he leads the life of a dissipated playboy, cruising New York City, drinking heavily and doing anything but working.

His family wants him to marry a young, beautiful, empty-headed heiress named Carol Johnson, but it's the last thing in the world he wants to do. Even so, he's willing to go along rather than risk losing his fortune — until, shortly before the wedding, he finds true love.

For Arthur Bach, love comes in the form of a poor Italian girl named Linda Morello (perfectly played by Liza Minnelli), who he meets when he observes her shoplifting a necktie in a clothing store.

He gets her out of the jam and — not surprisingly — they fall instantly in love. "Arthur" has many virtues, but the element of surprise is not one of them.

All this takes place during the first half of the movie. The second half is devoted to Arthur's attempts to avoid marrying Carol Johnson so he can run away with Linda Morello.

It's all the more amusing because the struggle is completely internal — will love of Linda win out over love of money? But, as I've already said, there are no real surprises in this movie, so you should be able to figure out what happens.

Now, I don't mean to suggest that, just because Dudley Moore plays a somewhat poignant part, "Arthur" isn't funny. It's very funny, and will have you rolling in the aisles during some parts.

Acting as the perfect comedic foil for Moore is John Gielud, who plays Arthur's butler, Hobson. Hobson is a suitably dry, snobbish, English butler. At one point, when Arthur is feeling lonely the morning after an all-night drinking session, he asks Hobson, "Do you know what's the worst part about being me?"

Hobson replies, "Your breath, I should imagine."

But, while Hobson knows Arthur is unbearably immature, he also knows he could save himself if he could find the strength to get away from his family. He's also very fond of Arthur, and gives him a good deal of assistance in his attempt to win Linda.

The movie was written and directed by Steve Gordon, whose directing nicely complements his writing: having written a good script, he merely sits back and films his excellent cast, and doesn't try to be obtrusive as a director.

In fact, all the elements of "Arthur" blend together nicely into an integrated whole. While it hasn't gotten the publicity some other movies have this summer, it's fine entertainment, and except for a few instances of adult language, is suitable for the entire family.

Little known facts

Although there are some 650 institutions of higher learning in China, there is room in China's colleges for only about 4 percent of the high-school graduates in any year, National Geographic says.

Series EE Savings Bonds come in eight denominations with purchase prices beginning as low as $25. They can be purchased automatically through the Payroll Savings Plan offered by thousands of employers or the Bond-A-Month Plan offered by commercial banks.

United States Savings Bonds that are lost, stolen, mutilated, or destroyed will be replaced free by the Treasury Department upon application by the owner.

More than half-a-million individuals volunteer to work on behalf of the U.S. Savings Bonds Program each year. These people include recognized leaders of business, banking, labor, government, and the media.

Secretary of the Treasury Donald Regan has called U.S. Savings Bonds a way to "help your country and your fellow citizens to a better future."

Curacao's forts reminder of 18th century

Centuries ago, Curacao's forts kept residents and visitors well protected. Today, the forts keep them well fed. Within the old vaulted bastions of three of Curacao's remaining seven forts are restaurants, and on the site of another is a luxury hotel.

A visit to Curacao's forts — guarding St. Anna Bay, overlooking cliffs at Caracas Bay and on hilltops in Willemstad — brings to mind the Curacao of the 18th century when the island, occupied by the Dutch, fought off pirates and British sea invasions.

The forts of the Caribbean usually were built by or for trading companies who had to be able to resist relatively small invasions by pirates rather than the attack of a navy or an army.

A week after occupying Curacao in 1634, the Dutch built Waterfort, at the east side of Willemstad's harbor entrance. Three more forts eventually were built on the site of this original Waterfort; the last, which still remains, had 136 turrets and vaults containing stores, stables and even a medical service.

In 1957 the Curacao Plaza Hotel was erected on Waterfort. Because of its unusual harborside location, it is the only hotel in the world that has taken out a marine collision insurance policy.

At the same time that the Dutch built Waterfort they erected Fort Amsterdam, which was completed in 1637. Fort Amsterdam today remains an imposing site with its other-colored governor's residence facing St. Anna Bay on the Punda side of Willemstad. Fort Amsterdam serves as a seat of the Government of the Netherlands Antilles. Besides the governor's residence, the fort contains buildings housing government offices, the Dutch Reformed Church and the seat of the Ministerial Council.

Rifort, on the Otrabanda side of the harbor, dates from 1828 and is identical to Waterfort. The crossfire that the 56 cannons of Rifort together with those of Waterfort could provide made St. Anna Bay inaccessible to hostile vessels.

Rifort served many purposes: in 1908 the first wireless telegraph station was established here, and later the Harbor Authority, Public Works, the Police and even the Boy Scouts occupied it.

In 1978 a restaurant was opened in some of the casements of Rifort and called Bistrot le Clochard, a name that has its own history. Following World War II, the area around Rifort was reduced to poverty and the fort was therefore used as a shelter for homeless adults, the French term for which is "clochard".

The idea of opening Bistrot le Clochard, which serves French and Swiss cuisine, proved so successful that another restaurant — Le Recif — was opened in 1980 within the bastions of Rifort. Le Recif is Curacao's only exclusively seafood restaurant.

Fort Nassau guards Willemstad harbor from a hilltop location. It was erected in 1796 and was first called Fort Republiek, since Curacao at the time was a republic. In 1816, the fort was named Fort Oranje Nassau after the Royal House and later was simply referred to as Fort Nassau.

Today, Fort Nassau offers visitors one of the most romantic settings for dining at its restaurant, which serves both local and continental cuisine. To reach the restaurant, patrons must climb the grand stone steps leading up to the massive fortress doors and pass through stone corridors and along casements now housing the kitchens. The dining area is at one end of the fort, surrounded by a great terrace affording a spectacular view of Willemstad at night.

The Fort Nassau Restaurant became such a popular evening spot that in 1980 an intimate nightclub was opened there and named infinity.

Fort Waakzaamheid, overlooking the Otrabanda entrance to the harbor, is still called "Ombredooje" by Caracaoan old timers. Ombredooje means "ombre box," like which the fort is shaped. In olden times, Caracaoans played ombre, a three-person card game with chips which are kept in an ombre box. In 1975, a cafe restaurant was opened here, and dinners atop the walled fort feature fresh fish and grilled specialties.

Waakzaamheid was built to protect the capital in 1803. In 1804 the British, under the famed Captain William Bligh, invaded the fort and, from here, heavily shelled the capital for almost one month.

For more information on Curacao's forts or on the island, contact your local travel agent or the Curacao Tourist Board, 685 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022; telephone (212) 752-8266.

Bullish

period. During that time Massachusetts was the only New England state to experience such a gain. All others lost ground.

The New York Stock Exchange further estimated that 57 percent of Massachusetts adult share owners of public corporations held portfolios under $5000.

With many small investors actively participating in the securities marketplace, the role of the government regulator becomes increasingly important.

In Massachusetts, the Securities Division of State Secretary Michael Joseph Connolly's Office is the official state watching agency.

"Our role in protecting Massachusetts citizens from fraud has become more demanding in the past few years. With more of our citizens trying to squeeze value out of their shrinking dollars, more and more investment programs are being offered as the solution. All of these securities need to be carefully scrutinized for legitimacy and compliance with state standards," Connolly said.

Last year Connolly saw a marked upsurge of all securities activities. That trend, he says, is continuing in 1981 at an even greater rate.

"What puts us far ahead of other states as a financial leader is the great number of private placement offerings issued in Massachusetts," Connolly explained.

A private placement involves an offering of stock or other securities (such as interests in an oil and gas or real estate venture) to a very small of highly sophisticated and experienced investors in high risk ventures.

With second quarter statistics just in, financial analysts are very bullish about investment activity in Massachusetts through at least the remainder of this year. The number of new issues of corporate securities filed prior to sale totaled over 625 for the first half of 1981, an increase of more than 70 percent over 1980. The number of private placement offerings filed was almost 500 for the first six months of 1981, up more than 40 percent over 1980. Mutual fund registrations were up by almost 50 percent over the first half of 1980.

This year Connolly's office will oversee the registration of more than 11,000 stock brokers and 500 firms. Additionally, he will receive close to 3000 securities filings, representing billions of dollars of investment programs.

Accounting for such healthy investment statistics, Connolly said, "The extremely high volume of new securities offerings coming into the Commonwealth reflects the confidence of capital raisers and investors in the growth of our economy."

With all that good news running across Massachusetts tickertapes, there's invariably a downside. In the area of securities, it's fraud. It's the small number of phony deals peddled by unregistered "boilerroom operators" and other unscrupulous promoters. It's the unregistered shares in non-existent mines and oil wells. It's the take-the-money-and-run guys.

"The first-time investor is not the only victim of these schemes. As preventative medicine, all potential investors should do their homework and seek professional investment counsel before making a buy," Connolly cautioned.

Connolly's office has investigated 126 complaints so far this year. The Securities Division has issued 15 disciplinary and administrative orders and referred several cases to state and federal law enforcement agencies. Investors who need assistance should call the Securities Division at (617) 727-3548.

Homeowner's Advisor

by Gary J. Litchfield
Realty World-Class Realty

WHY IT'S A GOOD TIME TO BUY

QUESTION: I'm curious about your thoughts on the timing of a home purchase. Is now a good or bad time to buy? Are your thoughts in line with other people in the real estate business? I enjoy your excellent column every week. Keep up the good work.

ANSWER: My thoughts parallel those of the general membership of the National Association of Realtors. In a recent survey of the members of this 730,000 member organization, 83 percent felt that now is a good time to buy a house. They pointed to several reasons which contributed to their opinions. Here are some of these reasons along with the percentages of those responding who indicated that these reasons were major or contributing factors.

Purchase before home prices increase: Major Factor 69 percent, Contributing Factor 28 percent.

Seller willing to help with financing: Major Factor 69 percent, contributing Factor 29 percent.

Good selection of existing homes for sale: Major Factor 57 percent, Contributing Factor 35 percent.

Mortgage interest rates will not come down much: Major Factor 38 percent, Contributing Factor 52 percent.

Good selection of new homes for sale: Major Factor 38 percent, Contributing Factor 34 percent.

People's incomes are rising: 15 percent. Contributing Factor 53 percent.

Money is more available: Major Factor 12 percent, Contributing Factor 40 percent.

It's obvious from this study that the major reasons the brokers cited for buying a home today were a high probability of significant price increases combined with a good selection of existing homes for sale, and the seller's willingness to assist with financing.

The members of the National Association of Realtors are in an excellent position to monitor these decision making guidelines. And their overwhelming agreement indicates that a delay in purchasing a home will only be more costly, even if interest rates come down a little.

Swing your partner

By WILLIAM PACINO

This week's offerings feature a dance craze that has never ended — square dancing. Two different groups spotlighting do-si-doing, and one dance society offering classes, are presented.

Single Squares

In the past, Square Dancing was thought of as a couples oriented activity. However, this concept is rapidly changing, with growing numbers of single Square Dance clubs forming to teach beginners, as well as to provide an environment where experienced dancers can exercise their skills.

Single Squares is just such a club. Going into its third year, this club operates as a non-profit organization sponsoring two dances each month and is now forming a weekly class for beginners. People of all ages who would like to dance but do not have a partner are invited to learn Modern Western Square Dancing. Interested individuals are encouraged to drop in at the Hastings School (Crosby Road at Mass. Ave.) in Lexington on Wednesday evening 7:30 p.m., Sept. 16, 23 or 30. The donation is $2.50 per lesson with no obligation to continue.

Yankee Twirlers

Square dancing offers individuals a unique opportunity to be accepted for what they are rather than who they are. It allows people from every age group and walk of life to share a physically active and mentally stimulating sport and to enjoy each other's company in the process.

The Yankee Twirlers invite you to join them weekly beginning Tuesday, Sept. 15. Your first fun night is free. Come to the Towanda Club, 19 Abbott St., Woburn Center at 8 p.m. For more information, call Lou and Judy Marsolini 658-2544 or Newell and Donna Cantrill 369-4388.

Scottish Country Dance

THEATER:

The Quannapowitt Players, 55 Hopkins St., Reading, announce the opening of their 1981-82 season with Ernest Thompson's warm, witty and sensitive drama, "On Golden Pond." This is the story of Norman Thayer, who is about to celebrate his 80th birthday and wonders if this, his 48th summer on Golden Pond in Maine, will be his last.

His energetic sixty-nine-year-old wife, Ethel, senses Norman's frustration with growing old and becomes his pillar of strength, realizing he needs something to renew his vitality and his interest in life. It is at this time that their daughter, Chelsea, pays a long-awaited visit, bringing with her a new boyfriend, a Los Angeles dentist and his 13-year-old son, Billy. A strong bond of admiration and friendship grows between Norman and Billy. This relationship between a young boy who delights in learning about his surrogate granddad and an old man who needs to feel useful again, brings the warmth, sensitivity and humor of "On Golden Pond" to life.

Under the direction of Ed Levine of Revere, the cast, consisting of Harold Bond of Reading as Norman; Jay Phillips of Malden as Ethel; Nancy Curran of Wakefield as Chelsea; Bill Previti of Stoneham as Billy; Dean Peterson of New Hampshire as Bill and John Wood of Malden as Charlie the mailman, has been hard at work to bring this delightful piece to the QP stage.

Production dates for "On Golden Pond" are Sept. 18, 19, 25, 26 and October 2 and 3. Ticket reservations can be made by calling the Quannapowitt Players or W. James Lawthers, 282 South St., Reading.....

George Bernard Shaw's comedy "Misalliance" begins the Lyric Stage Theatre Company of Boston's fall season on Wednesday, Sept. 9 at 8 p.m.

Written in 1910, "Misalliance" focuses on parents and their children and, of course, love and marriage. In "Misalliance" Shaw has fashioned a delightful mix of English curmudgeon fathers, silly children, and post-Victorian ladies, who are confused over feminism, socialism, masculine ideals, love and marriage. All is put right by a Polish female aviator whose plane crashes in the family greenhouse.

"Misalliance" is performed at the Lyric Stage, 54 Charles St., Boston on Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays at 8 p.m.; Saturdays at 5 p.m. and 8:30 p.m.; and Sundays at 3 p.m., through Oct. 25. Reservations may be made by telephoning 742-8703. Tickets may be purchased at the Lyric Stage box-office or at Out-of-Town Tickets, Harvard Square, Boston or through Theatre Charge by calling 426-8181.....

great labor organizer Mother Jones, old and bold and battling, strides across the fighting history of the U.S. and into the heroic present. This rousing musical play, set among the mining men and women of Appalachia, reassesses the proud heritage of America.

The show will play each Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 2 p.m. for three weeks, from Sept. 18 through Oct. 4. For information and ticket reservations call 242-3534 (Charlestown Working Theatre) or 232-2666 (Little Flags).

The Concord Art Association, located at 37 Lexington Rd. (Route 2A) in Concord (Tel. 369-2578), will present a multimedia show featuring Sculpture by Connie Georgaklis of Brookline; Photography by Roy Hines of Concord; Watercolors by Dean Minor of Natick; and Art Enamels by Kitty Olsner of Acton. This exhibition will begin Sunday, Sept. 13, and will continue through Oct. 4. Exhibition hours are 11-4:30 Tues. through Sat. and 2 to 4:30 Sundays.

OTHER:

Sunday, Sept. 13, at 8 p.m., Country music star Hank Williams Jr. and the "Bama Band" will perform at the Shriners Auditorium at Fordham Rd. (Exit 13 off Rt. 93) in Wilmington. Tickets are available from the Shriners Box Office 657-4203 and at all Ticketron outlets, as well as Hub Ticket Agency and Out-of-Town Agency. Earlier in the day on Sunday, Sept. 13, an Old Tyme Country Fair, featuring live country music from local groups, exhibits provided by the 4H Clubs, rides, food and square dancing with crowd participation will be taking place on the Shriners Fair Grounds. This Country Western Fair is being held to benefit the American Lung Association and will be held between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. The sponsors of this event are the American Lung Association of Middlesex County and Boston Country Radio Station WDLW. ## Photographing your pet can be a snap

By Edward A. Leonard, D.V.M.
Director, Veterinary Medicine
Animal Rescue League of Boston

In dealing with animals, the virtue one needs the most is patience, whether you're a veterinarian examining a sick animal, a trainer giving obedience lessons, or a proud owner trying to capture your pet's unique personality on film.

Trying to rush a photo session or force your pet into posing when it would rather be off on its own pursuits is sure to produce unsatisfactory photos. We see a variety of animal photos here at the League, many of them sent in by people who have adopted their pets from our shelters. These photos differ widely in composition and appeal, often as a result of the amount of thought that went into preparing for the photo session. Taking a good pet photo requires patience, ingenuity and usually lots of film, but by avoiding certain pitfalls you should be able to produce pet portraits that you'll be proud to share with friends and relatives. Here are some common mistakes to avoid when photographing your dog or cat:

Too many distractions — loud noises, running children or appetizing food in the vicinity will make it impossible to capture your pet's attention.

Cluttered backgrounds — keep backgrounds simple so they do not detract from the animal. Always pose a dark animal against a light background, and vice versa. If you are using color film, try to pose your pet in front of background colors that pick up the highlights of your dog or cat's fur.

Poor lighting — a dark animal, especially, needs a good source of light in the front or above its head to highlight the features. Interesting effects can also be achieved by silhouetting a small animal in front of a window, with natural light highlighting the fur.

Lack of props — a basket, paper bag or other similar intriguing item will not only help keep your pet interested but also makes an interesting photo prop. You can also give your pet something it enjoys doing, like chewing on a favorite toy or playing with a ball of yarn, or pose it in a normally forbidden spot like the living room couch or a comfortable bed.

Poor angle and/or distance — most neophyte photographers make the mistake of getting too far away from their subjects. Get close enough to frame your pet in the camera lens without distracting background.

Having a problem with your pet? Write Pet Care Corner, Animal Rescue League of Boston, P.O. Box 265, Boston, Mass. 02117.

In preparation for a tour of the mining fields of Appalachia, Little Flags Theatre's musical drama, "The Furies of Mother Jones," will return to the Charlestown Working Theatre, 442 Bunker Hill St., Charlestown, where it had its premiere four years ago.

Real cowboys disappearing

By David F. Salisbury

The number of urban cowboys and cowgirls may be multiplying like mad, but times are tough for the genuine article.

The adverse economics of the cattle business is forcing many of the Rocky Mountains, the lure of high wages for working on oil rigs or in coal and hard-rock mines is siphoning off former ranch hands, including many of the younger members or ranch families.

"There's fewer and fewer cowboys all the time, but there's still some real good ones left and people are real proud of them," draws Ellis Freeny of the Oklahoma Cattlemen's Association.

In Wyoming — the Cowboy State — agriculture officials say the number of hired hands working the ranches there has declined by one-third — from 6,000 to 4,000 — in the last five years.

There are two factors behind this decline, explains Bob Bud of the Wyoming Stockgrowers' Association. One is competition with oil fields and mines. "There is no way we can pay $9, $10, even $14 an hour like they do at an oil rig or a mine," he says. Typical pay for an unmarried hired hand on a Wyoming ranch is $500 to $550 a month, plus room and board.

The second factor is the poor economics of the cattle business lately. Ranchers have made money on their beef only one year in the last seven. "In the last five years, 1,300 ranchers have gone out of business here as well," says Mr. Bud. The remaining stockmen have cut down their herds and are trying to get along with only family help.

The picture is similar in Colorado. "I don't have any statistics, but I know we're losin' a lot of people in the western part of the state. Not only experienced hands, but also young people from the ranches. Right now, ranching is hardly a paying proposition. So, even if they want to, it doesn't balance out to stay," reports Hugh Halleck of the Colorado Cattlemen's Association.

In Montana, the major threat to ranches is the severe drought in the eastern part of the state. In New Mexico, "Ranchers can't pay hands enough to live on," asserts Denny Gentry of the New Mexico Cattlegrowers' Association.

But the cowboy image still packs considerable appeal. "Oh, there are plenty of people who come here, looking for a job as a cowboy. But good hands, people with skill and heart,
